BY GEORGE DICKIE

Ciera Payton stars in "Wendy Williams: The Movie," premiering Saturday on Lifetime.

Talk show host Wendy Williams tells her story in biopic and documentary on Lifetime

How is Wendy Williams doing? Just fine, thank you very much, but it wasn't always that way.

Indeed, the host of the syndicated "The Wendy Williams Show" has experienced many highs and lows over the course of 30-plus years on her way to television stardom, as told in an upcoming biopic and documentary on Lifetime.

In "Wendy Williams: The Movie," premiering Saturday, Jan. 30, Ciera Payton ("The Oval," "A Madea Family Funeral") stars as Williams, a girl from Asbury Park, N.J., who found her niche as a disc jockey in the late 1980s and rode ratings success at radio stations in New York and Philadelphia to the top of her profession. And later, of course, to a thriving TV career.

But the road to get there was rocky and she endured much heartbreak and pain, including rape by an acquaintance, drug abuse, an abortion, two miscarriages, a stillbirth, a husband living dual lives and a subsequent divorce, bad management and health issues, including a very public collapse on her show in 2017.

Williams serves as executive producer on the drama, which also stars Morocco Omari ("Empire"), Rebecca Davis ("Ice"), Liza Huget ("Riverdale"), Drummond Macdougall ("Arrow") and Rothaford Gray ("Mary Kills People").

The film portrays Williams as the ultimate survivor, someone who never let setbacks get to her or get in her way and who never let anyone tell her who she is. That's illustrated in an early scene in the movie, when she makes a conscious decision to not let her mother's criticisms define her but rather drive her to attain her goals.

"I knew what I wanted to do," Williams explains. "I was very involved with the college radio station and also an internship ... I'm gonna impress them by doing the four years and when I get out of here, my life is totally mine. And I'm gonna show them and I'm gonna show the world. I'll show 'em, I'll show 'em, I'll show 'em. I'll show 'em I'll be a good jock on the radio. Sure, a good one. Award-winning? I wasn't sure but I'd get an award and win something."

Of course, she did more than win something. Fame, fortune and awards came her way but so did trouble. In the end, her perseverance saw her through, which she says is the message behind the movie.

"If she can do it, I can at least try," Williams says. "Now, what it is, I'm not exactly sure. ... (And) stop being so sensitive. At least until you get in the house, then if you want to cry or be mad or whatever. But stop being so sensitive."

Immediately following on Saturday is the documentary "The Wendy Williams Story ... What a Mess!" which Williams also executive produces and tells her story with footage and commentary by Williams herself.

In Focus

Emmy winner Phil Keoghan ("The Amazing Race") isn't afraid to put in whatever it takes to get the job done in his various professional capacities, so it's only natural he'd wind up hosting and executive producing Season 2 of this reality competition series that both challenges and celebrates working-class Americans. Contestants undertake real-world designated tasks to check their strength, endurance, agility and mental toughness. Even if they "punch out" in the individual competition, they still have a chance to win additional prizes in team competitions.

"Unseamly: The Investigation of Peter Nygard: Season 1" (discovery+ — series premiere, Feb. 12)

This four-part true-crime documentary thriller looks at the case of Canadian fashion mogul Peter Nygard, aka "the King of Polyester," who led an extravagant lifestyle with posh homes and beautiful women. He also wound up on the wrong end of a class action suit accusing him and his companies of rape, sexual assault and sex trafficking dating back to the 1970s.

Jennifer Connelly

"SNOWPIERCER: THE COMPLETE FIRST SEASON"

Inspired largely by the 2013 action movie directed by "Parasite" Oscar winner Bong Joon-Ho (who serves as an executive producer here), this TNT series — set in what was the near future when it was televised, but now in sync with 2021 — focuses on a massively long train that runs around the world continually with the last traces of mankind on board. Social class determined who is stationed where, and which amenities and privileges they are entitled to ... sowing the seeds of a potential uprising. Jennifer Connelly plays the chief authority on the locomotive, with Daveed Diggs ("Hamilton") as the possible leader of the brewing revolution; the large cast also includes Mickey Sumner, Alison Wright, Lena Hall, Mike O'Malley and Rowan Blanchard. This release coincides with the Season 2 premiere of the show Jan. 25 on TNT, which adds Sean Bean as a prominent full-time star. DVD extras: five "making-of" documentaries. ★★★ (Not rated: AS, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray)

"FATMAN"

Though he has stayed in action mode in many of his recent projects, Mel Gibson has offered offbeat characters within that context — not unlike his Martin Riggs in the "Lethal Weapon" series — and he does so again in this dark comedy that still has a very strong action quotient. Gibson plays a financially ailing Alaskan businessman named Chris Cringle (care to guess his nickname, which is where the "Fatman" reference comes from?) whose situation leads him to make a deal with the government to furnish jet-fighter parts. At the same time, he's pursued by a professional assassin (Walton Goggins,

"The Unicorn") hired by a wealthy youngster (Chance Hursfield) who's been wronged by Chris. Marianne Jean-Baptiste ("Without a Trace") also stars as Chris' wife in the film, which had a very recent run in theaters that were open and available. ★★★ (R: AS, P, GV) (Also on On Demand)

"DOOM PATROL: THE COMPLETE SECOND SEASON"

After spending its first season exclusively on the DC Universe service, this superhero saga also was shown on HBO Max for this sophomore round. The members of the title group — who include Robotman (played by Brendan Fraser), Negative Man (Matt Bomer), Elasti-Girl (April Bowlby), Crazy Jane (Diane Guerrero) and Cyborg (Joivan Wade) — use the powers they inherited in various accidents to overcome their outcast status and help defend the world from supernatural threats. They also have to protect their newest member (Abigail Shapiro), the daughter of the man who brought them together (Timothy Dalton). The series has been renewed for a Season 3 that will run only on HBO Max. ★★★ (Not rated: AS, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray)

"THE COURT JESTER"

This Danny Kaye comedy classic makes its Blu-ray debut as part of the "Paramount Presents" series. Presented in a new 6K scan, the 1955 tale casts him as an entertainer whose ruse to position himself as the best in his field eventually puts him up against a medieval villain (a properly sinister Basil Rathbone). Also in the great supporting cast are Abgela Lansbury, Gynnis Johns, John Carradine, Mildred Natwick and Alan Napier (alias manservant Alfred on television's "Batman") — but even with all that additional talent, the enormously and uniquely talented Kaye expectedly is the one who chiefly makes the show here.

This edition includes a Leonard Maltin-hosted "Filmmaker Focus" feature highlighting longtime creative team Melvin Frank and Norman Panama, who also worked with Kaye on "White Christmas." ★★★ (Not rated)

"SYNCHRONIC"

A series of strange "accidents" in New Orleans clues two paramedics and longtime friends, played by Anthony Mackie ("The Hurt Locker") and Jamie Dornan ("Fifty Shades of Grey"), into the existence of a bizarre drug that turns fantasy into apparent reality for the user in this melodrama from "The Endless" filmmakers Justin Benson and Aaron Moorhead. For any worries they have initially, they become more dire when the Dornan character's eldest daughter vanishes, prompting them to step up their efforts to determine exactly what's going on. Katie Aselton also stars. DVD extras: three "making-of" documentaries; audio commentary by filmmakers; deleted scene; alternate ending. ★★★ (R: AS, P, V) (Also on Blu-ray and On Demand)

Ingram relishes go-to role in the Big Easy

Zion Williamson may have the name recognition factor but Brandon Ingram usually has the final shot. Indeed, when the game is on the line for the New Orleans Pelicans, the ball more often than not will end up in the hands of their 6-foot-7-inch small forward, who has responded with a stellar performance early in 2020-21.

Through the season's first week, the fifth-year man out of Duke was leading the Pels with 23.3 points per game on 45.7 percent shooting with seven rebounds and 6.5 assists. His efforts earned him Western Conference Player of the Month for Week 1.

Also emerging are his leadership characteristics. Ingram wants the ball in pressure situations and when he fails, he has no problem taking the blame. In fact, even when he makes mistakes in an otherwise great game, as he did in a recent 28-point effort in a win over the San Antonio Spurs, he'll fess up.

Which speaks to character, a trait Pelicans' head coach Stan Van Gundy loves and is a big reason why the team chose to award him with a five-year, $158 million contract in preseason. It's also why New Orleans made him the linchpin of the deal that sent Anthony Davis west to the Lakers in the fall of 2019.

Ingram and the Pelicans can be seen in action Friday, Jan. 29, when they clash with the Milwaukee Bucks at home in the early game of an ESPN doubleheader.

'Lidia Celebrates America: A Salute to First Responders' a love letter to those who serve

As a food professional, Lidia Bastianich feels a kinship with first responders.

Indeed, the chef, author and food ambassador knows that much like her own profession, there is a nurturing aspect to the jobs of medics, firefighters, ambulance drivers and police that doesn't get enough attention. And she wants to give those folks their due in "Lidia Celebrates America: A Salute to First Responders."

Premiering Friday, Jan. 29, on PBS (check local listings), the hourlong special follows Bastianich as she virtually (due to the COVID-19 pandemic) meets dedicated paramedics, military, police and firefighters on the front lines and learns what it truly means "to serve." She also sees how food plays a prominent role in their everyday lives on the job.

"For me, food is I guess a venue for many things," Bastianich explains. "Yes, it is for nurturing, nurturing us physically but also emotionally. You know, you communicate with food, food expresses who you are, and food is positive. As much as in today's world we malign food for all of our ailments, food is positive. It gives us life, it continues to keep us alive and so you can find comfort in food."

That was certainly the case in one of the stories in the special, that of Eddie McNamara. A retired New York City cop who was a first responder at Ground Zero on 9/11, he turned to the culinary arts as a means of coping with his PTSD, which not only gave him comfort but a second career.

"That's what he discovered and found, and he's very happy," Bastianich says. "You know, (he wrote) a nice cookbook and he does, I think, recipes for others. So it's a nice profession But if you're into food and the preparation of food or whatever, it can really give you a good life financially and also emotionally."

In the case of Jacob, a firefighter in Sonoma County, Calif., the reward was in seeing his cohorts deriving enjoyment and satisfaction from the meals he creates. For this, Lidia gave him a risotto recipe to make and in return, she got a taste of the culinary life of a firefighter.

"They all have like a little kitchen, they cook, they bring things in," she says. "And what pleased me very much was ... people bring them food. That's one way of saying thank you, so they get plenty of cookies, they get lasagnas or whatever."

Ultimately, Bastianich wants to call attention to the good work these folks do and get them some love.

"Maybe (people need to) re-understand how much we need each other as a society," she says, "that we all have our different roles. And how can we give back? You know, we might not have the passion of being a fireman or a policeman or whatever, but let's not forget to appreciate the people who do. Let's make sure that they're taken care of, that we are grateful and they know it. So it's, you know ... being thankful and what can we do to sort of give back to our society, maybe not on those levels but in our own little world."
