Richard Thomas narrates
"The Waltons' Homecoming"
Sunday on The CW.

Richard Thomas has a 'Waltons' homecoming in new CW movie

Richard Thomas not only played eldest son John-Boy on "The Waltons," he also wanted to do the show's opening and closing narration.

Now, a half-century later, he's getting that chance.

The actor returns to the franchise that made him an Emmy-winning star as The CW debuts the new movie "The Waltons' Homecoming" Sunday, Nov. 28. A remake of the film that became the pilot for the beloved 1972-81 series about a close-knit Depression-era mountain family, it lets Thomas reprise the part of John-Boy, but as the adult narrator ... the spot initially filled by "The Waltons" creator and executive producer Earl Hamner Jr.

"When I first read the script," the amiable Thomas recalls of the original production, "and there were these beautiful narrations at the beginning and the end, I was so excited. I thought, 'I can't wait to read these.' And then I was told, 'Actually, because he's the older John-Boy, Earl Hamner is going to read those.' But finally, it's come full-circle, and I'm really happy to have been invited to the party."

In "The Waltons' Homecoming," John-Boy is portrayed by Logan Shroyer, alias the teenage incarnation of Kevin Pearson on NBC's "This Is Us." He happens to be a friend of Thomas' grandson, fortifying the bond between the two actors as they share an iconic role. "I knew what The Waltons' was because I knew he was still recognized as John-Boy," Shroyer explains. "I hadn't really seen any of the series, which I actually don't think is a bad thing. I think that kind of helped me."

While Shroyer arguably is the best-known of the actors playing the younger family members, the snowstorm-involving "The Waltons' Homecoming" also features Ben Lawson and Bellamy Young ("Scandal") as parents John and Olivia, Rebecca Koon and Alpha Trivette as the Walton grandparents, and music veterans Marilyn McCoo and Billy Davis Jr. as church personnel.

"If you've done a show or a movie that they're remaking, there's always that first moment of, 'Oh, no, we're history now,'" Thomas reflects. "And then immediately after that, there's the feeling of, 'Well, of course. It makes perfect sense.' And how wonderful, because this is a classic, and classics are destined to be reinvented and done again for a new time. It's kind of the ultimate compliment."

"The Homecoming: A Christmas Story" was made as a one-shot 1971 film, but CBS chief William S. Paley was impressed enough by it to order the "Waltons" series (still shown regularly on the Hallmark Drama channel) from it. Thomas is gratified to revisit it now in a different way, noting the job "was easy for me to do, because I have such profound feelings about that show."

Relax. We've got this.

DISCOVER FLORIDA'S FIRST LIGHTHOUSE

Where it all began...

To understand the significance of Menorcan's at the St. Augustine Lighthouse, we must recognize their role in its history. Many lightkeepers were of Menorcan descent, including Juan Andreu, the first lighthouse keeper in the newly lit St. Augustine Lighthouse, Juan Carrera, Joseph Andreu, Maria Andreu, and Siladonio Pellicer. These individuals, whose ancestors traveled to New Smyrna to work as indentured servants, were instrumental in the rise of Menorcan culture in St. Augustine.

Perhaps the most notable of Menorcan Lighthouse Keepers was Maria de los Delores Menstre Andreu, a woman of many firsts. After her husband Juan's tragic passing, Maria became the first female lighthouse keeper and Hispanic-American woman to serve in the United States Coast Guard and command a federal shore installation, setting a precedent for Hispanic American women serving in the military. For over 150 years, Maria Andreu's trailblazing experience has inspired generations of women to serve their country.

Kevin Durant scoring at will for Nets

For a guy who suffered what would ordinarily be a career-ending injury not that long ago, Kevin Durant has certainly looked every bit his old self. Maybe even better.

Indeed, in the season's first few weeks, while his Brooklyn Nets struggled on court and with the controversial absence of point guard Kyrie Irving, their 33-year-old power forward has been playing arguably the best basketball of his career, scoring over 25 points in each of his first five games and ranking among the league leaders in points and rebounds.

This comes nearly six months after his virtuoso performance in the Eastern Conference Semifinals, when he put the Nets on his back and nearly willed them past the Milwaukee Bucks. In that series, he averaged 35.4 points, 10.6 rebounds and 5.4 assists in the Nets' seven-game loss to the eventual NBA champs.

And he's about to become historically great. As of late October, he stood 26th on the NBA's all-time scoring list with just over 24,000 career points, within easy range of passing No. 25 Allen Iverson (24,368), No. 24 Ray Allen (24,505) and No. 23 Patrick Ewing (24,815) this season.

No one could have foreseen his prolific performance when he went down with a torn Achilles tendon in the NBA Finals in June 2019. But here he is, continuing on his path to the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame – and what the talented Nets and their faithful hope, is a league title.

Durant and the Nets can be seen in action Tuesday, Nov. 30, when they play host to the crosstown rival New York Knicks in a game airing on TNT.

'Buddy vs. Duff' decks the halls with Christmas-themed cakes

The competition gets more festive but no less fervent when pals and rivals Buddy Valastro and Duff Goldman square off in a four-part bake-off upcoming on Food Network and discovery+.

In Season 4 of "Buddy vs. Duff," premiering Sunday, Nov. 28, the two master pastry chefs and their teams come together for a special competition to celebrate the holidays. Each group selects a theme and then has 20 hours to bring their vision to cake reality, with the final products being judged by Gesine Prado and Elizabeth Falkner at Valastro's bakery in New Jersey and Stephanie Boswell and Valerie Gordon at Goldman's bakery in Los Angeles. The overall winner receives $25,000 to be donated to the charity of their choice.

It's a scene certain to be filled with Santas, reindeers, trees and of course, lots of snow, which Goldman says is particularly tricky for a baker to create.

"If I was going to do a miniature of say like a snow-covered village," he explains, "I would probably make it smooth because when you're flying and you're flying over an area that has been snowed on, it looks like a smooth, white blanket. But if something's going to be life-size, then you want to put texture on there because if you don't then your eye kind of tricks you into thinking that it's much, much, much bigger than it actually is."

And there were other skills that Goldman had to call on. He had to pull his ice sculpting talents out of mothballs to create a sculpture for a cake. And to make Christmas ornaments, he had to reacquire himself with the fine art of blowing sugar.

"For really good Christmas ornaments you need to blow it out of sugar just like you're blowing glass," Goldman explains. "That was another thing that I hadn't done probably since culinary school, and I was like, 'Man, I gotta figure out how to do this.' I watched a video on YouTube of how to blow sugar and then made a bunch of Christmas ornaments for this tree and it was really, really cool."

Of course, at the heart of the show are Goldman and Valastro, two world-class pastry chefs who have great respect for their craft and each other. That they also get along on camera and off is the (pardon the pun) icing on the cake.

"I feel like for the scale, there's not many people that can do what we do," Goldman says, "And I think that that's really exciting, is that we are combining so many different disciplines into what we create. You know, the engineering, the building, the design, the color theory, the actual baking, the stuff we're doing with food. There's so many sort of different components it's almost like we created this like – I don't even know what to call it – genre."
