coverstory

BY ANTHONY RICHARDS

Firm focuses on elder law, trusts, asset protection and Medicaid eligibility

Joseph L. Boles Jr. started Boles Law Firm in 1990 after serving as an associate to Farris McGee in Flagler County from 1984 to 1986 and partnering with Davis Parker of Parker & Boles from 1986 to 1990.

However, in 1990, he began his journey as a sole practice with the opening of Boles Law Firm in St. Augustine.

“Florida has a vast population that has very special needs for asset protection and estate planning,” Boles said. “If you turn 60 in Florida, the odds are good that you will make it to 92.”

Elder law is something that the firm has specialized in providing to the community since 1992.

Boles has always been fueled by his passion for what he does and that enjoyment he has for his work is reflective in the law firm and its approach taken by each of its eight employees that form its staff.

Some of the services they provide include protection of assets and the handling of the proper transfer of a person’s assets after they die.

According to Boles, what sets his law firm apart from others is their focus on specialization.

“We do not try to be all things to all people,” Boles said.

Instead, they focus on being the best they can be at areas they focus on, such as elder law, trusts, asset protection and Medicaid eligibility.

One thing you will get when you work with Boles Law Firm is a welcoming atmosphere that treats customers as if they were family.

“Our atmosphere is warm, friendly and traditional,” Boles said. “Half our staff is related, and the rest are great friends.”

Boles Law Firm is located at 19 Riberia St. in St. Augustine.

“Back in the Groove”

Taye Diggs (the “Best Man” film franchise) hosts this four-episode unscripted series that brings four fortysomething single women to the Groove Hotel, a luxurious Dominican Republic resort, with the goal of rediscovering their youth, living joyously and hopefully finding love with men half their age. (ORIGINAL)

“Grails”

ESPN anchor Hannah Storm is among the executive producers of his documentary series that gives a behind-the-scenes look at entrepreneurs Earl Cooper and Olajuwon Ajanaku, former Morehouse College golf champions who created the lifestyle brand Eastside Golf to promote diversity on the golf course. (ORIGINAL)

“Letterkenny”

The 11th season of this Canadian comedy finds the residents of the titular small town contending with the best chip flavors, lost dogs, an influencer invasion, Skid business, a mystery at the church bake sale, unwanted guests at beer league and the Degens stirring up trouble. Creator Jared Keeso, Nathan Dales, Michelle Mylett and K. Trevor Wilson are among cast returnees. (ORIGINAL)

“Movie: Enough Said”

Included on many critics’ 10-best lists for 2013, writer-director Nicole Holofcener’s comedy-drama features what was one of James Gandolfini’s last performances. In an engaging departure from his tough-guy roles, he plays the new love interest of a single-mom masseuse (Julia Louis-Dreyfus, also superb). Little do they suspect they have someone in common who could thwart their relationship. Catherine Keener and Toni Collette also star.

A family-owned restaurant thrives in San Francisco on 'Chef Dynasty: House of Fang'

If family dynamics served with a side of restaurant business is what you crave, a docuseries coming to Food Network and discovery+ may sate the palate.

In "Chef Dynasty: House of Fang," premiering Tuesday, Dec. 27, viewers are introduced to the Fang family of San Francisco, who own and operate the House of Nanking, a popular Chinese eatery and fixture on the Financial District culinary scene since 1988.

At the restaurant's heart are its father/daughter co-owners Peter and Kathy Fang, who also represent its yin and yang. While Peter, 74, is old school and tends to prefer the recipes that made the restaurant the hot destination it is, 40-year-old Kathy feels it's important to modernize the menu, take risks and play to young influencers.

And while there is a natural conflict between these forces, "Chef Dynasty" isn't about arguments and drama, stresses Kathy Fang, as much as it is a window into the running of a successful family restaurant. And it all starts with her and Peter.

"There's this whole theory with my dad that if it's not broken don't fix it," she explains. "And it's hard sometimes because my dad has been so successful with House of Nanking, you can't argue with him ... . He's always talking about people coming in and wanting the same things. They don't want new dishes; they want the same friggin' thing that they had 20 years ago.

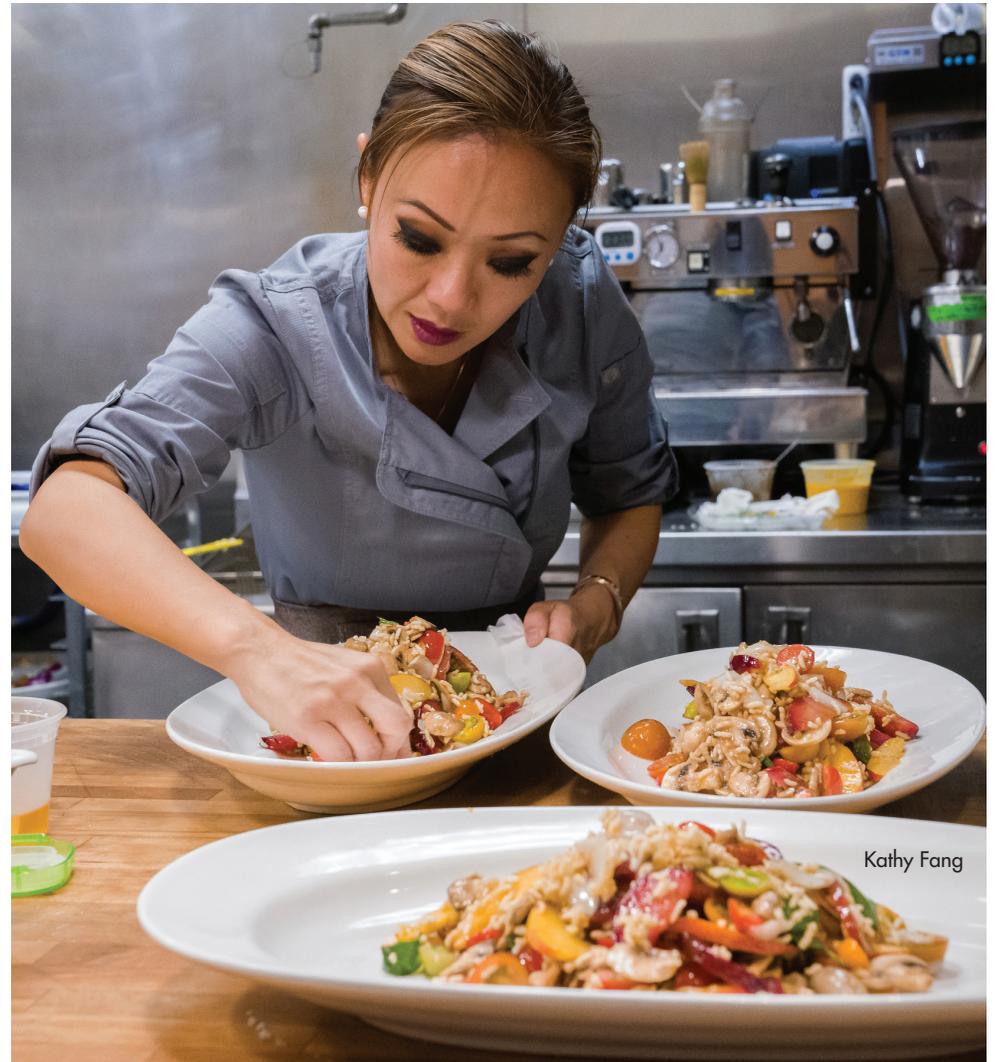

They'll be sad if it's not there anymore. So there are a lot of valid points to what my dad is saying and I take all those into account.

"But we also still have to innovate and change with the times," she continues, "because I don't think you can do the same exact thing for 50 years. Maybe you can do it for 40 years, 45, but it's not going to work 60 to 80 if we want to create this dynasty. Maybe my kids will want to do this, too, then we do have to evolve. ... I'm trying to make that happen but I want my dad on board every step of the way."

Along with the requisite kitchen scenes with staff, there will be shots of dinner service. For this, cameras were brought into the dining room, which made some diners uncomfortable and request seating off camera. But others were intrigued and embraced the experience.

"Some people come here to celebrate birthdays," Fang notes, "and they're so excited that they could actually be on the show on the day of their birthday that people stayed longer. They're like, 'We're going to get more drinks. I hope you don't mind. We're going to stay at this table the whole time.'"

"So what I was concerned about early on, (that) it might disrupt the business, kind of faded away later as we realized that most of the time people were actually very excited about it."
