Legislators reflect on session accomplishments

by DAVID COLBURN
Cook/Orr Editor

Bakk, Ecklund bring benefits to North Country

REGIONAL— As the 2021 special legislative session wrapped up this past week, it was clear that area lawmakers saw plenty to like in the final bills that emerged.

“I have a favorite day of the session,” said Sen. Tom Bakk, I-Cook, “the day after we finished when I drive home, because I rarely turn on my radio. “I just spend that time thinking about things. I was thinking about everything that happened during the session, and I actually pulled over and sent (Sen. David)

Tomassoni a text and said ‘David, I’m thinking about all of the stuff we got done and I can’t even believe it.’”

Perhaps at the top of the list for both was achieving tax relief for recipients of federal Paycheck Protection Program business loans and additional unemployment insurance benefits.

“That was my bill,” Bakk said. “Those two things together were almost $700 million, and it was a little bit of a struggle to get done because it was pretty expensive. But it was going to be taxed, so that was a big deal.”

Rep. Rob Ecklund, DFL-International Falls, agreed. “Our businesses went through such a such a jolt this past 15 months,” Ecklund said. “They didn’t need to worry about paying taxes on something that the federal government wasn’t going to tax.”

TOWER HARBOR

New trail funding approved

Allows delayed trail connection, kayak route to move ahead

by MARSHALL HELMBERGER
Managing Editor

TOWER— After two years of waiting and hoping, city officials here received some good news from the state Legislature last week. A funding plan approved by lawmakers includes an extension for the second phase of a harbor trail system that had been mothballed after the mishandling of the first phase of the project back in 2018-19.

The funding had originally been approved by the Legislative-Citizen Commission on Minnesota Resources, or LCCMR, back in 2016, but LCCMR officials put a hold on the dollars after the city made major changes to the first phase of the project without seeking required approval.

The extension means the city can move forward with a $600,000 plan to build a paved connecting trail from the city’s harbor to the Mesabi Trail spur that goes to Hoodoo Point. The project will also include a road extension that ELY - A sparse agenda for the city council here this week found council members in the middle of a dispute between neighbors over lawn mowing. One neighbor wants to mow the lawn on portions of city property surrounding his property on Sibley Drive. The other neighbor doesn’t want him to.

Apparently, Andy Hill, of 2111 Sibley Drive, has been doing the extra lawn mowing outside his

12-year-old aces a hole-in-one at The Wilderness

TOWER- On Saturday, June 19, Blake Miller from Edina, just 12 years old, was golfing at The Wilderness at Fortune Bay with his parents, Justin and Laura. Blake had set his ball up on hole #3, named The Walleye, on the green tees approximately 133 yards to the pin over the water. "We saw the ball disappear," said Justin. "We were silent from complete shock when Blake threw his club up in the air!"

"This is the longest par-three at The Wilderness,"

said Rachel Indihar, Director of Sales and Marketing at The Wilderness. "To really give you an idea of how rare holes-in-one are, we average about 12 holes-in-one out of thousands of rounds each year. In addition to our history, the PGA says the odds of an average golfer making a hole-in-one are 12,500 to 1!"

Some people go their entire life without a hole-in-one. Justin stated his son had been playing golf for six years because his grandma is such a huge golfer. Blake first started playing The Wilderness four years ago when they purchased a place nearby.

"It was such an honor to be working when Blake aced his hole-in-one. We give all holes-in-one at our course a Wilderness embroidered flag. You could really see the excitement on his face when they came into the Pro Shop post-round. He was so polite, such a sweetheart," said Indihar. "Let's just say we will never forget Blake's accomplishment. Well done, Blake."

Dr. Thomas Morgan to address History Nights, July 14

ELY- Dr. Thomas Morgan, a professor at the College of St. Scholastica and the University of Minnesota-Duluth, will speak at the Ely-Winton Historical Society's History Night on Wednesday, July 14. He will be talking about the migration of Finns from Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, as well as Canada, to Russia in the 1930s. Called the Karelian Fever, those Finns believed the propaganda of Stalin's Russia and moved to Russia. They were deluded. Some managed to escape and make their way back to freedom. Others died in Russia. "I'm thinking of talking mostly about my personal experiences "discovering" a "lost colony" of Duluthians in Soviet Karelia in 1986 and the transformational impact that the "discovery" of these "Red Finns" has had on my life and the lives of others," said Dr. Morgan.

Dr. Morgan has taught the Russian language and culture at both colleges for many years. He is particularly interested in cross-culture issues and has explored in a variety of ways the experience of American and Canadian Finns in Soviet Russia. With Russian colleagues, he has founded and directed a series of summer language camps for college students. The camps are held in Russia for American students and at St. Scholastica for Russians in alternating years.

Dr. Morgan has a strong interest in the international aspects of peace and justice issues. He was involved in the development of the Duluth International Peace Center, a citizens group of the 1990s that fostered international cooperation and peacemaking at the grass-roots level. He currently is involved in helping to develop a relationship with citizens in a city in northern Iraq and is on the board of Duluth Sister Cities International.

This program and others in the series will be held in CL 104 at Vermilion Community College. Starting at 7 p.m., the program is free and open to the public. A free-will donation is appreciated.

Ancient Cedars Trail exhibit at the Art Corner kicks off on July 9

Artwork was sourced from artist sojourns through the stand of 100-plus acres of white cedar dating back to about 1880. Attendees will be able to meet the artists and enjoy light refreshments.

Participating exhibit artists include Pamela Davis, Nancy Ensley, Wendy Rouse of Ely, Jordan Gawboy of Tower, Jeff Argir, Louise Laakso Lundin of Hibbing, Jim Devries of Britt, Linda Glisson, Margie Helstrom, Sue Rauschenfels, and Nan Stubenvoll of Duluth.

EMERGENCY RESPONSE

Fuel tanker catches fire on Hwy. 169 west of Ely

by KEITH VANDERVORT
Ely Editor

ELY - Highway 169 about two miles west of Ely was shut down last Saturday afternoon for more than six hours because of a fire involving a semi truck that was pulling a tanker of gasoline.

According to a report from Morse-Fall Lake Fire Chief Ted Krueger, as related to the Northland Fire Wire, around 2:15 p.m.

Saturday the brakes of the semi caught fire and the blaze spread to the vehicle's tires. The truck driver uncoupled the burning vehicle from the tanker. The front of the tanker hit the ground, rupturing a tanker pocket containing 3,400 gallons of gasoline.

The load of gasoline was headed to Ely when the fire occurred.

Fire officials estimated as much as 350 gallons were spilled. Local road equipment was brought in to contain the spill and the remaining gasoline from the damaged tanker was transferred to another tanker, according to Krueger.

No injuries were reported. The truck had extensive fire damage. The Morse-Fall Lake and Ely fire departments responded to the call, along with the Ely Police Department, St. Louis County Sheriff's Department, and Minnesota

State Police.

Traffic was diverted from State Highway 169 to County Road 88 (Grant-McMahan Road) for several hours as tourists made their way into Ely for the Fourth of July weekend.

COVID-19

COVID-19 vaccinations plummet during June

by DAVID COLBURN
Cook-Orr Editor

REGIONAL - Summer is here, COVID-19 restriction mandates are gone, and so, too, it appears, is the vigor that only three months ago prompted a record-high 413,000 doses of COVID vaccines administered in a single week in Minnesota.

Last week's total of 35,378 doses was the second lowest since vaccines began to be distributed to specific priority groups in mid-December. The peak number, reached in the first week of April, came as vaccinations were opened to anyone 16-years-old and over and has been on a steady decline ever since.

The needle on the state's vaccination dashboard indicating the percentage of Minnesotans over 16 who have had at least one dose of vaccine barely budged over the past month.

State officials were in full swing promoting their "Your Shot to Summer" vaccine rewards campaign on June 5 as the needle sat at 64.9 percent. One month later, that campaign is over, and as of Tuesday the number had risen to just 67.2 percent.

Unequal interest

Signs were already apparent in early June that some areas of the state were more readily embracing vaccinations than others. Minnesota

Public Radio reported on June 5 that while the Twin Cities metropolitan area had already reached the 70-percent goal, outside of that region only 57 percent of Minnesotans had been vaccinated once, and the pace of vaccinations has slowed since then.

In 14 counties, fewer than 40 percent of residents have been fully vaccinated. Todd County, northwest of St. Cloud, is the lowest with a fully-vaccinated rate of 29.3 percent. By contrast, Cook County, in northeastern Minnesota, has the highest percentage of fully-vaccinated people at 69.8 percent.

And fully-vaccinated people aren't the ones who are still getting COVID-19, according to Minnesota Department of Health data.

"We can confidently say that the vast majority of cases, hospitalizations and deaths occurring in Minnesota are in unvaccinated people," said MDH Information Officer Doug Schultz in a July 2 email to the Timberjay. "We track breakthrough cases very closely. Those are cases that occur in people who are fully-vaccinated. Out of 2,771,183 fully vaccinated Minnesotans as of May 30, we had a cumulative total (since Dec. 1) of 3,080 breakthrough cases with 333 hospitalizations and 46 deaths. That equates to 1.1 percent of vaccinated people who have developed COVID."

Voter suppression

What if Democrats made it harder for Republicans to vote?

If you can't beat 'em, join 'em?

As Democrats grow increasingly frustrated with new voter suppression laws being passed by GOP-dominated legislatures all across the country, it's worth asking what voter suppression might look like if Democrats decided to quit fighting those efforts and started implementing their own suppression tactics.

Keep in mind, Republicans are implementing their suppression efforts in states where they control legislatures and have Republican governors willing to sign such provisions into law. But there are states where Democrats have control across the board, including some traditional swing states that could be pivotal in close presidential elections. Minnesota could well be among those states following the next election. What if DFLers here at home decided to play the suppression game in an effort to tilt the electoral map in their favor?

Just as Republicans have focused suppression efforts on urban areas, where large percentages of voters back Democrats, a Democratic version of voter suppression would turn the tables, by implementing the same kind of tactics in an effort to limit the participation of rural voters, who have increasingly backed the GOP.

One of the easiest suppression tactics, which the GOP is deploying wherever it can, is the closing of polling places and the reduction of early voting opportunities in areas that tend to support Democrats. Mostly, that's been focused on urban centers, particularly those with significant minority populations. Residents of those areas can still vote, since explicitly denying that constitutional right would surely be tossed even by the most conservative courts. Instead, these suppression efforts are designed to make voting more inconvenient, by requiring urban voters to travel farther and, typically, wait in longer lines to vote than they otherwise would.

Those of us who live in rural areas often don't recognize the substantial additional burden that urban voters already face with long lines to vote, so anything that makes those lines even longer is certain to prompt more voters not to participate. If it didn't, the GOP would have abandoned such tactics years ago.

Democrats could implement laws that achieve the same objective, with a different group of voters, by making it more difficult for rural voters to cast ballots. What if, rather than voting right in your own township, a future Minnesota Legislature decided to reduce the number of polling places in rural areas? The Legislature, after all, could pass a law that eliminates the authority of townships to run their own elections. That could force most rural residents to travel to regional centers, in larger cities, to cast their ballots. In St. Louis County, the Legislature could implement a new law that would restrict voting locations to Virginia, Hibbing, and Duluth, for example. In many of Minnesota's most Republican counties, like the many small counties in east-central and southwestern Minnesota, voting could be limited to the county seat.

Then, implement strict rules on absentee voting, which would require voters to provide hard copies of a wide range of documentation to prove their identity. That's easier for urban residents, since a copy machine is typically not far away. Rural residents would almost certainly have to drive to find one.

Such tactics would very likely reduce the number of ballots from rural areas, which would have the effect of suppressing the Republican vote. Before anyone suggests such a move would be thrown out in court, consider that the current Supreme Court is largely signing off on suppression tactics against Democratic voters that are every bit as blatant and targeted as we just described.

Certainly, we're not advocating that Democrats pursue such policies, which are inherently antithetical to a democracy. Yet, for residents in small towns or rural parts of the state, it's easy to dismiss the efforts by the GOP to limit the votes of urban voters. By considering what the shoe might look like on the other foot, it's easier to recognize the problems inherent in the GOP's efforts.

Such efforts are a hallmark of a party that recognizes it is outside the political mainstream. That's particularly true since the rise of Trump, which has morphed the GOP into a white nationalist party fueled by grievance and dedicated to the continuation of rule by an ever-shrinking minority of conservative, mostly rural, white voters. Democrats, by contrast, have responded—admittedly with frequent missteps—to the needs of a changing country and view greater participation by as broad a cross-section of the electorate as possible as the key to their future success. That's why the Democrats, in the end, won't take their cues from the GOP's voter suppression playbook. And, for that, we should be thankful.

Letters from Readers

Voting is our frontline defense

January 6, 2021, revealed how fascist elements of our society are determined to undermine the electoral process with the attempted insurrection to overthrow democracy. The right to vote is crucial to our First Amendment protection of religion, speech, press, peaceful protest and petition. Voting is voice and virtue of civic expression in action.

Contempt for rule of law, authoritarianism and white supremacy are exhibited by the Republican Party actions in our state legislatures around the country. We must realize that our Bill of Rights is inextricably woven together with electoral politics. Forces of reaction are openly working to squelch political democracy, as it has successfully silenced organizing for economic democracy.

Civic religion sees voting as faith and prayer in action for the soul of democracy. Voting as form of speech gives voice and consent to our representatives. The press is tribune for our right to read, write, think and act freely in open debate. The vote formalizes collective protest and petition of people power in action.

Voter fraud is an insidious “big lie” effort to suppress minority voting rights. Behind the lie, McConnell's zero-sum mindset drives white supremacist fear of minorities becoming the nation's majority. Zero-sum dog-whistles and racist tropes by the Republicans are clear signals of threat to our vote and civil rights. Zero-sum fallacy sees gains by one of two sides as a loss for the other. I win, you lose doesn't have to be.

The office of private citizen is most important in public governance. A coalition of the working class cooperating with minorities is an advantage to both. The plutocracy has divided the working class and minorities for too long. Voting is a frontline defense for our civil rights and turning a win-lose situation into win-win, for both!

COMMENTARY

Summing up democracy

It's so easy, in the course of our day-to-day lives, to get caught up in the political pre-occupations of the moment. What's the Senate going to do about the filibuster? How should infrastructure money be spent? Is the country going to come out of this year as badly divided as it started? These and many other questions matter a lot—but sometimes, it's helpful to step back and take stock of what we've learned over the course of our history.

I've been thinking about this because I've been reading Jon Meacham's 2018 book, “The Soul of America: The Battle for Our Better Angels.” In it, Meacham notes that we've been badly divided and knocked back on our heels in the past but have always managed to work our way through those difficulties. He cites a variety of writers and speakers, and a number of them have stuck with me—because they're both reassuring and a challenge. They remind us that sustaining our democracy is hard work and that its vitality depends on each of us—not just to participate, but to make the effort to understand and talk to people we don't agree with, and to do our best to discern the facts on which all genuine progress relies. Here they are, with a couple I've added on my own that speak to the same issues:

“Do not expect to accomplish anything without an effort.” Teddy Roosevelt said this in an 1883 speech called, “The Duties of American Citizenship.”

“The first duty of an American citizen, then, is that he shall work in politics.” This is Roosevelt again, in the same speech, making the point (in the language of the time) that being an American citizen means being willing to engage in the work of democracy.

“Speak up, show up, and stand up.” That's Georgia's Stacey Abrams laying out, in concise form, the basic challenges for anyone trying to affect the course of public life.

“Progress on this journey often comes in small increments.” This is Meacham himself, with a reminder that progress comes slow and hard.

“Nowhere is the rule of public opinion so complete as in America, or so direct.” This was Englishman James Bryce, writing in The American Commonwealth, which appeared in 1888.

“People are responsible for the government they get.” Harry Truman summed up our core responsibility: we have to choose our political leaders wisely.

“It is not only important but mentally invigorating to discuss political matters with people whose opinions differ radically from one's own.” Eleanor Roosevelt wrote this in a book published when she was seventy-six, “You Learn by Living: Eleven Keys for a More Fulfilling Life.”

“The enemy of America is not our many Muslim friends. It is not our many Arab friends. Our enemy is a radical network of terrorists and every government that supports them.” I include this remark by George W. Bush—in thought tunnels with a different angle, which made me laugh and moan at the same time. This thread goes back a long ways: My freshman year in college I had signed up for a philosophy class, Great so-called advisor, who had just met me and knew nothing of my inclinations or abilities. It was supposedly a 100 level course, but the reason the advisor suggested it, and I agreed, was that I wanted four hours and most were only three. It also fulfilled the math requirement for graduation; the University of Colorado apparently recognized that math and philosophy both use logic, so that was good enough for them.

I hadn't wanted to avoid math; quite the opposite. In high school I had been in fast-track math classes, but my comprehension hit the skids when I got to solid geometry and trigonometry my junior year. I really tried, asked for help from my excellent, devoted math teacher, who was sincerely excited about math and very willing to help, but it still eluded me. So I did not take any math my senior year, feeling like a failure. However, through a quirk of test construction and diverse brain functions, I was a good test-taker, so I scored very well in the math section of the SAT. I explained all this when I met with the advisor and asked if I could take some less advanced math so I could really come to understand it. He said I couldn't take those classes for credit; that it would be perceived that I was just going for an easy A. Hence, I ended up in a four-hour class that I was absolutely unprepared for. I couldn't have told you what “philosophy” meant, and I came out of the first lecture dazed.

Aguy in the class asked if I'd like to have coffee, and he shared that he had taken 12 hours of philosophy in summer school before his freshman year just for fun. I knew then that I was in for a world of hurt. Naive 17-year old

ISD 2142 conducting $8,000 survey of broadband needs

by DAVID COLBURN
Cook-Orr Editor

Results could lead to district-driven solutions to issues

REGIONAL- Like every other district in Minnesota, ISD 2142 St. Louis County Schools faced a critical question in March 2020 when Gov. Tim Walz ordered all schools to go to distance learning in the face of the growing COVID-19 pandemic. Which families had internet service, and more importantly, which had the high-speed broadband connections that were best-suited for the variety of online instructional sites the district would be using?

“We did have to scramble and get the information we needed to provide the services,” Superintendent Reggie Engebritson said. “I sent out a survey link to all the parents and guardians in our student management system to find out who needed what. We had parents who heard about the survey and contacted the schools because they did not get the email and/or did not have internet service to respond to an online survey. We did the best we could to get the word out to families.”

According to statewide surveys of both teachers and parents, the rollout was challenging as gaps in coverage were discovered that made equal access for all impossible. ISD 2142 tried to address some of its issues when distance learning was still in the mix as school resumed last fall.

“We purchased both AT&T and Verizon hot spots for families who needed them,” Engebritson said. “Sometimes the hot spots helped and sometimes they did not. We are limited in what additional support we can provide without the bandwidth available to the families. If families did not have a connection, then we provided paper/pencil copies of work for them. This was delivered by our school buses during typical drop off times or parents could pick up the work.”

ISD 2142 expects to be in full in-person learning mode for the upcoming school year now that the pandemic has receded, but the experience of the past year-and-a-half reinforced the emergence of broadband-based instruction as a complementary and potentially effective instructional methodology for the future.

Through a regional partnership between the Blandin Foundation and the Department of Iron Range Resources and Rehabilitation, ISD 2142 recently received an $8,000 grant to map student homes throughout the district to determine existing broadband speeds and plan for a wireless broadband network to address the needs.

It’s a solution several school districts throughout the country embraced during the pandemic, including one in Murray, Utah. Facing serious gaps in broadband coverage for areas with low-income students, that school district put up 44 towers to create free wireless access for all to its broadband service, using federal COVID-19 funds to cover the cost.

A district that encompasses nearly 4,000 square miles and a huge and disparate number of municipalities, townships, and service providers is an altogether different scenario than that of a small urban district. But still, the need is clear.

“I’d say the people who suffered the most without a connection during the pandemic were children,” said Minnesota Rural Broadband Coalition lobbyist and spokesman Nathan Zacharias. “There’s no doubt that some of the hardest areas to serve in the state are in St. Louis County. And it’s not fair that people are being told to wait. Help is on the way, but these networks aren’t going to be built overnight.”

Range Association of Municipalities and Schools (RAMS) is spearheading the ISD 2142 survey effort. Executive Director Steve Giorgi announced his retirement this summer but described the survey and its goals in an email to the Timberjay.

“The $8,000 will allow for mapping of survey results including speed tests, student/family locations, and placement of towers or utilization of existing towers, including water towers when available,” Giorgi said. “The wireless broadband network is being considered as a short-term solution, as fiber to the home is the ultimate solution to the lack of quality high-speed broadband in rural areas of St. Louis County. All towers would have a fiber connection, thus being able to provide the best possible signal to those within range of the towers’ signal. The survey will help the district and those participating in this project to determine if there is a strong demand for better service by the families in the district boundaries, and if it’s financially feasible to construct a wireless system covering the entire district.”

“The need for better broadband service is real,” Engebritson said. “It’s 2021. This should not be a problem for the people who live in northeastern Minnesota. Whether the need is to work remotely, do schoolwork, connect with family members who live far away, or relax by watching movies or playing online games we should all be able to enjoy what others are able to enjoy who have basic broadband connections.”

Engebritson encouraged all district families to participate in the survey, including those with existing high-speed broadband connections, so that an accurate picture of what is and isn’t available can be developed.

ISD 2142 families can take the survey online by going to <https://forms.gle/DtWPnz6YpJ8oRksq7>. The survey can also be accessed by smartphone by scanning the QR code accompanying this article.

Delta variant

MDH is tracking the incidence of five “variants of concern” through random and targeted samples of tests sent to the department’s laboratory weekly. That work is demonstrating that the Delta variant, which has garnered much recent attention nationwide as more contagious and for its higher hospitalization rate than other variants, is establishing a foothold here.

Across seven months ending June 14, 43 cases caused by the Delta variant had been identified. In the subsequent two weeks, 30 more Delta variant cases were found. Eighteen percent of those cases resulted in hospitalizations, markedly higher than the seven-percent rate caused by the state’s dominant UK variant.

While the seven-day case positivity average of 1.2 percent statewide remains well below the threshold for wide community spread, health officials continue to express concern for areas with low vaccination rates and their increased susceptibility to outbreaks among the unvaccinated and partially-vaccinated.

Bois Forte breakthrough

The North Country got its own reminder on Tuesday that fully vaccinated people still have a small risk of contracting COVID-19, as Bois Forte Band health officials announced the reservation’s first breakthrough case, an individual in their 30s living on the Nett Lake sector.

Bois Fort Health Nurse Teri Morrison could not provide additional details because of confidentiality restrictions. However, she confirmed that the rate of vaccination of tribal members 12 and over currently stands at 54 percent.

The age of the individual infected is consistent with county and statewide data indicating that new COVID cases are concentrated primarily in younger age groups. State health officials have noted that this is a result of the concentrated initial focus on vaccinating older Minnesotans. To date, 90.7 percent of Minnesotans 65 and older have received at least one shot.

a speech he gave to a joint session of Congress following the 9/11 attacks—because it’s a cogent reminder that keeping our eye on the target matters in public policy.

“The people have often made mistakes, but given time and the facts, they will make the corrections.” This was Truman again. I like his confidence.

“America of the 21st century is, for all its shortcomings, freer and more accepting than it has ever been.” Meacham makes it clear that our nation, despite its many stumbles, has moved toward progress—in no small part because the American people, as Truman suggests above, have set it on that course.

“It is in order that each one of you may have through this free government which we have enjoyed, an open field and a fair chance for your industry, enterprise and intelligence... The nation is worth fighting for, to secure such an inestimable jewel.” Abraham Lincoln said this in 1864. His words remind us that safeguarding a freely chosen, democratically-elected government that creates the conditions for each of us to succeed by dint of our efforts is what engaging in politics is all about.

that I was, I didn’t realize that I could drop the class. It was torture; the lecture was right after lunch, and I often fought to stay awake and often lost. It was like the professor was speaking Urdu. During the required tutorials, I would bury my head behind my books to avoid being called on or noticed in any way. I stayed up three nights in a row at the end of the semester to pump out two term papers rife with B.S. I squeaked by with a D and was grateful for it, when in my previous life, I would have been mortified with a B-. However, I did glean some pearls of wisdom from the philosophy nut that I have carried with me through life.

He asked, “What are three things that you dislike about other people?” When I answered, he said, “Those are aspects of yourself that you dislike the most.” That was our only interaction, but his words laid the foundation for a core of understanding about myself and others during the rest of my life. When I’m being objective, I recognize that when I’m annoyed by or critical of another person, I can almost always identify some aspect of what’s going on as reflecting one of my less desirable traits of which I am not proud. Having this self-awareness has not saved me from being judgmental, but it does mean I have at least the inner honesty to recognize the mirror and feel some embarrassment about not catching it quicker, as in before feeling the judgement. Rarely does it slip by me...my awareness does not let me off the hook.

I have relayed that philosophy nerd’s questions on to others through the years. It certainly wouldn’t be news for those who delve into self-help, psychology, and “discovering the inner you” books. For example, who has not heard the admonition, “In order to love (forgive) anyone else, you have to love (forgive) yourself first.” How many of us function like we really understand that? It’s the mirror! How little we want to see that reflection. In spite of the fact we know the undesirable characteristics intimately, because we embody them, we will still project outward and criticize others for the same shortcomings.

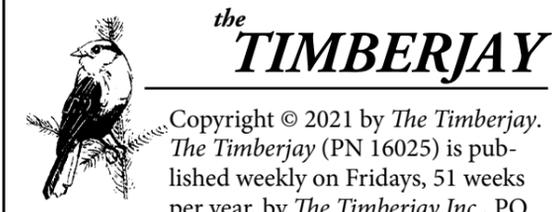

Annie Lamott, author of fiction and non-, advises would-be writers that they probably don’t have to worry too much about people recognizing themselves in stories if the writer just changes some key attributes. She tells a story of a friend she used as a model for a character in one of her books who was always negative, saying that she could resent the sun on a beautiful day. Her friend read the book and said, “You know that character who resents the sun?” Annie waited for the anger to follow, but her friend said, “I know someone just like that.”

What I’m seeing now is that the mirror may be at the heart of our differences, and I don’t see how we can find our way out of this house of mirrors. Many wise people say we have more in common than we have differences, and we just need to recognize that and find the common ground. But how do we get there? The joke may be that the common ground is not only our desire for happiness, world peace, and a good future for our children, but also our shared not-so-admirable characteristics, such as stubborn self-righteousness, and we sure don’t want to see or admit that we share them with someone whose values appear to be the opposite of ours.

I just finished reading “The Invisible Bridge” by Julie Orringer, a well-documented, beautifully-written novel about a Jewish family in Hungary in the 1930’s and 40’s. The atrocities of human beings against others when prejudice and fear are sanctioned, and the victims’ incredible will and ability to survive, even helping others, through horrendous torture and deprivation are equally stunning portrayals of human nature.

I have heard left-wingers and right-wingers use exactly the same words to describe each other. I am still searching for a way to have an authentic, non-explosive conversation with people who disagree with me heartily. I’m taking a course called Compassionate Communication to help me figure that out. I’ll let you know how it goes.

Tribute to honor Renee Lassi at Veterans Memorial Field

Scholarship fund started in her name

ELY – A special tribute will honor a special Ely resident on Thursday, July 15 at Veterans Memorial Baseball Field. Renee Lassi died last fall due to complications from COVID-19 and family and friends will honor her at the place she spent most of her time in the summer.

Her son, Ely school teacher and coach Cory Lassi, said he could think of no better place to honor Renee than at the ball park. "During the summer months, if you wanted to find my mom, your best bet was to check the concession at the ball field," he said. "She spent countless hours each summer, slinging burgers, stocking the fridge, painting, being a second mom to so many of the young men that walked through that gate."

The Junior Legion team game begins at 5 p.m., followed by the Senior Legion game at about 7:15 p.m. "We will be having a short ceremony to celebrate my mom before the start of the Senior Legion game," Lassi said. There will also be a ceremonial first pitch in her honor. In between innings of the Legion game, there will be memories of Renee Lassi shared over the public address system. "We will also have a memorial area set up during both games to honor my mom," he added. "We will share pictures along with a spot for anyone to share their loving memories of her."

Lassi related his mom's love of feeding people. One of her favorite things to make in the concession stand was her famous pulled pork. "We will be trying our best to make her delicious pulled pork sandwiches and pulled pork nachos available for the Junior and Senior Legion games," he said.

For every pulled pork sandwich and pulled pork nachos sold at the games that night, the Ely Baseball Association will be donating $2 to a scholarship fund in Renee's name.

"Without a doubt, my mom woke up every morning wanting to make a difference in the lives of others, especially the students of Ely Memorial High School. We wanted to make sure that we carry on her legacy in providing opportunities for the students at EHS," Lassi said.

A donation bucket for her scholarship fund will also be available "My mom was always such a selfless person who always put others first. We know that she is smiling down knowing that people will be enjoying her delicious pulled pork, and it will be making a huge difference in the life of an Ely High School graduate who will be receiving her scholarship," he said. "This baseball program was so special to her for many reasons, but certainly at the top of the list is because of the relationships that she made with so many people."

COOK CITY COUNCIL

Levitating light poles get council scrutiny

County is responsible for street but may need city's help to accelerate short-term remedies

COOK-Whether one is walking or driving along Vermilion Drive in Cook on either side of its intersection with River St., it's impossible not to notice that street lights in that area have literally risen from the ground, anywhere from a few inches to more than a foot-and-a-half.

Sections of sidewalk are also shifting and deteriorating, and the combined elements are bordering on being safety hazards.

John Jamnick of JPJ Engineering and Cook City Council member Elizabeth Storm recently met with St. Louis County engineers to discuss the problem and shared information about the issues at the June 24 city council meeting.

Vermilion Drive is a designated county road that is St. Louis County's responsibility to maintain, and one possible cause for the rising light poles, Jamnick said, is that it appears the county used a non-standard system to install them.

"A lot of times when you put a light pole in you put down a sonotube-type base so you have five or six feet of concrete as a base for the light pole to sit on," Jamnick said. "Apparently with these, they're metal and they had kind of like a screw on the end and they screwed them into the ground."

A second significant factor is the ground itself. "It has to do with the clay soils in the Cook area," Jamnick said. "Clay is tight and it doesn't drain very well."

The extremes of Minnesota weather then cause shifting and upheaval, affecting both the poles and the sidewalks.

For the moment, the tallest of the risen bases still appear to be secure, Jamnick said.

"But that's a concern, it's a problem," he said. "We want to take them out and repair them."

That would be a short-term plan, Jamnick said, executed by the county and possibly assisted by Cook city personnel. It's one they discussed getting underway by the end of the summer.

But a long-term fix that addresses the totality of the problems in a comprehensive way isn't likely to be coming soon, Storm said.

"The earliest we could expect any movement on any of this would be possibly 2023, '24, '25, or '26 because they have a five-year plan," she said. "There would be some things we could do in between, like removing and replacing some of those cement sidewalk pieces that are such a mess, maybe with asphalt or something. The most important thing for us is safety, and to be ADA compliant, which they currently are not."

Jamnick and Storm will continue to meet with St. Louis County officials and report back to the council on progress.

In other business, the council:

► Approved a bid of $24,960 from Quality Flow Systems, of New Prague, for the city's lift station improvement project. Quality Flow Systems was the only contractor to bid on replacing two lift stations.

► Approved an invoice for $6,000 from JPJ Engineering related to services provided for developing a facility plan for wastewater treatment pond improvements.

► Gave approval for the ambulance service to buy two Apple iPads to replace outdated products.

► Heard a report from Storm about the Artists on Main Street program. Eleven proposals were received for the "It stARTS on River Street" promotion, and all were funded. Five proposed projects would involve installations on city-owned property and required council approval before proceeding, which was granted. All approved projects for this cycle must be completed by the end of the year.

Orr's July 3rd Fun Day

Last Saturday's Independence day festivities in Orr weren't just limited to the colorful splash and glee of the kids parade or the glitter and sparkle of the annual fireworks extravaganza over Orr Bay. From the pancake breakfast and the 5K run to antique tractors and an old-fashioned kids lemonade stand, July 3rd Fun Day had a little something for just about everyone, and dollar coins for kids who could persevere long enough against intense competition to scavenge through mounds and mounds of sawdust for the prizes.

FEDERAL FUNDING

Senator Tina Smith recommends funding for regional projects

by DAVID COLBURN
Cook/Orr Editor

REGIONAL - Minnesota's junior U.S. Sen. Tina Smith has filed a formal request for including approximately $26 million in next year's federal budget to support multiple initiatives to benefit North Country communities.

Ely, Greenwood Township, and Orr would be the regional beneficiaries if Smith's proposals make their way

Emergency services, broadband, and childcare could benefit out of the Subcommittee on Agriculture, Rural Development, and Food and Drug Administration and into the overall FY2022 budget that goes into effect Oct. 1. Her requests include:

- $5.5 million for construction of an ambulance station in Ely to provide modern living and working conditions.
- $5 million for the City of Orr for an emergency services facility that would house the city's ambulance and fire departments.

- $5.5 million for Greenwood Township for fiber optic broadband access for Lake Vermilion areas of the township and surrounding areas.

- $6.9 million for Bois Forte Tribal Government to provide fiber optic broadband access to the majority of Greenwood Township and its surrounding areas.

- $3.5 million for the United Way of Northeastern Minnesota to help fund construction of four new childcare facilities in Ely, Aurora, Chisholm and Pengilly serving an estimated 470 children in total.

While the emergency services and childcare projects are straightforward, the factors impacting fiber-optic-based broadband rollout in Greenwood Township are more nuanced. Earlier this year the Federal Communication Commission, through its Rural Digital Opportunity Fund, gave a preliminary award to LTD Broadband LLC to provide service in the area. The company's application is currently undergoing a more thorough second review, with no timeline established for its completion. LTD Broadband has little experience in fiber optic installations, and the FCC has the option to withdraw the award if it so chooses. Meanwhile, township officials have been exploring the possibility of finding an alternative provider.

Both Bakk and Ecklund were enthusiastic about bringing a new $440 million oriented strand board production facility to Cohasset. Set to be built by North Carolina-based Huber Engineered Woods, the plant is expected to bring more than 150 jobs to the region. The company secured financial commitments from the Department of Iron Range Resources and Rehabilitation and the Department of Employment and Economic Development, and the deal was sealed when a Bakk-authored bill was folded into the omnibus tax bill to provide up to $3 million annually in production incentives to Huber for the first ten years of operation.

"The forest products industry has been in a tough situation the past few years," Ecklund said. "I think this is going to be a definite plus for the logging industry. They will have a new customer and it will keep our suppliers in business."

Bakk's bill included a clause requiring Huber to buy 80 percent of its raw timber materials from Minnesota suppliers to qualify for the production incentives, which presents a bit of a challenge, he said.

"We're going to have to figure out how can find some loggers," Bakk said. "There's not enough people left on the logging side of things to service that plan. We got two years for construction, so there's time to do that."

Huber is expected to break ground for the project next spring.

An additional boon for current loggers was the inclusion of a relief package for loggers who bought state timber permits expecting to sell their timber to the Verso plant in Duluth, which closed down last summer. Permits for tracts that are unharvested are eligible for full refunds of the required 15-percent down payment and partial repayments for tracts where some cutting has already been done.

Broadband

Securing $70 million for the state's Border-to-Border high-speed broadband initiative was also near the top of their lists of accomplishments.

"I've been the chief author of the broadband legislation for the last four years, and that's a huge win for the state of Minnesota," Ecklund said. "You compile that with all of the federal money that will be coming in and we might finally get to the point where we can say Minnesota is true border-to-border broadband, but right now 257,000 households are unserved."

"That's the biggest (allocation) we've ever made, $35 million a year," Bakk said.

Outdoors

A little closer to home, Bakk mentioned several items that will benefit outdoor recreational opportunities in the North Country.

"We got funds for Crane Lake for the Voyageurs National Park Visitor Center. There's no visitor center there, and you wouldn't even think it's a gateway to the park," Bakk said. "I think it's about $6 million we got for that." The Voyageur Country and Prospector ATV clubs also received funding of about $1 million each for trail development in the region.

Ecklund noted that he also pushed for inclusion of $250,000 to plan for a state-wide ATV trail system plan similar to one that exists for snowmobiles.

Bakk also talked about a move to include property owned by the Dayton family on west end of Lake Vermilion and make it part of Vermilion State Park. The property, which Bakk said has been long promised by the Dayton family to be deeded to the state, is worth approximately $2 million. Through negotiations with St. Louis County, Bakk obtained an agreement to commit one-third of the payment in lieu of taxes for the property, about $10,000 annually, to the Lake Vermilion Fire Brigade, which is based in an unorganized township.

Ecklund also mentioned a bill he and Bakk worked on together that secured $1.6 million for the Entrepreneur Fund. That money will, in turn, help to leverage between $10 and $15 million in federal funding by helping small business secure loans, he said.

SCHOOL FUNDING

ISD 696 approves balanced budget for 2021-2022 school year

by KEITH VANDERVORT
Ely Editor

Operating spending, revenues projected at $8.326 million

ELY – School board members here reviewed a balanced budget proposal for the next year and adopted a 2021-22 budget at a special meeting last week that calls for spending just over $8.3 million in general and capital funds and collecting the same amount in revenue.

In a recorded audio presentation, ISD 696 business manager Spencer Aune outlined several budget assumptions for the 2021-22 school year, including a projected total enrollment of 538 students with an incoming Kindergarten class of 35 students. The 2020-21 adopted budget estimated an enrollment of 562 students, however, the COVID-19 pandemic reduced enrollment as more families chose to home school or left the district.

Previous indications assumed that the district's student population would grow next year. "We should be conservative in our enrollment estimates and hopefully we will have more students this fall," Aune said.

Increases for staff salary and benefits were estimated for the yet-to-be negotiated contracts. No other staffing changes are anticipated for the new school year.

The budget also assumes that the basic state aid will grow by one percent to $6,633 per pupil.

"In just recent days we are hearing that (state aid) could be as high as 2.45 (percent) and obviously that would help that budget if that's what come through from the state," Aune said.

Even with the one-percent state aid increase, general fund revenue shows an overall decrease of $218,587 from last year.

"This was caused by the decrease in student enrollment and the decrease in basic skills revenue with the lower free and reduced lunch numbers that Ely and much of the state had," Aune said.

New federal stimulus funds, from ESSER II and ESSER III programs, total just over $1 million that can be used over the next three fiscal years, according to Aune.

"This should help fill any budget holes we had due to less revenues and more expenditures due to the (coronavirus) pandemic this past year and uncertainties going forward," he said.

The proposed budget uses all of the ESSER II funds of $316,037 and $82,550 of the ESSER III funds, leaving $627,225 remaining to be used in Fiscal Year 2022, 2023 and 2024, he said.

"The application for those funds is due Oct. 1 so we have a little bit of time to decide how to use those funds," Aune said.

For expenses, Aune estimates a one-percent salary increase for all employee contracts at approximately $150,000.

"We had some savings on our property and liability insurance of about $20,000, and we are looking to purchase a new van for about $50,000," he said.

"We also estimate that all other expenditures will remain constant from last year, except for the 1:1 Initiative purchases including new technology and other pandemic-related expenses of masks, barriers, etc., and we don't see the need to purchase those items again this year," Aune said.

The 2021-22 budget represents a slight decrease to the overall unassigned fund balance to $1,590,774 from $1,647,031 from the 2020-2021 adopted budget.

"This represents about 20.2 percent of our operating expenses, which is in line with the fund balance policy of the school board," he said.

The budget was adopted unanimously.

will provide a launch point and trailhead kiosk on the north side of the Hwy. 169 bridge, near the site of the former boat launch. The launch point will serve as the start of a signed kayak route that will encompass the East and West Two rivers along with a portion of Lake Vermilion's Pike Bay. The project is now set to be completed by June 23, 2023. That marks a nearly three-year extension from the project's original completion date of June 30, 2020.

"Moving forward is great news," said Nancy Larson, the city's grant manager. The city council hired Larson to manage the city's grants in the wake of mismanagement by the prior city administration.

Project put at risk

Larson initially volunteered her time in an effort to salvage funding for the first phase of the project, which had been put at risk after city officials significantly altered the project from what they had described to the LCCMR at the time.

The LCCMR approved a total of $1.279 million for what was described as the "Tower Historic Harbor Nature Trail/Kayak Route," a proposal that was supposed to include construction of a walkway around the harbor along with a half-mile-long bituminous trail connecting the city's harbor zone to Hoodoo Point.

The proposed kayak route was expected to have been included in the $679,000 initial phase, but it was overlooked along with the connecting trail. Instead, the city commissioned the construction of the harbor walkway, but added harbor lighting and a floating boardwalk along a portion of the harbor, neither of which had been included in the original application.

City officials made the changes without seeking a required project amendment from the LCCMR and the scrutiny it eventually brought the project led to a suspension of payments until Larson and other city officials could make the case that they would still be able to complete the primary objective of the overall project in the second phase.

By scaling back original plans for a boat launch and by shortening the connecting trail to the Hoodoo Point trail, city officials now hope to complete the project with the remaining $600,000 from the original grant.

property limits for the past two summers, but the Ely City Police were recently notified of the random act of beautification and Hill was told by the local lawn mowing police that he would have to get permission from city leaders to continue the kindness activity.

Hill's property abuts Pioneer Drive on the north and he wants to keep the strip of city right-of-way, including the area around a fire hydrant, mowed shorter than city crews have time to keep trimmed. He wants to do the same thing on the south side of his property along Sibley Drive adjacent to city-owned undeveloped land. Finally, he wants to mow along the west side of his property, along the Trezona Trail, including the portage trail to the nearby Miners Lake. He wants to "keep the trail clear of debris, windfall and dog (droppings), and keep the access to the water line free of logs that jam up against it."

Hill noted, "It is so great to see kids fishing down there and others (able to put) in their canoes and kayaks."

A nearby neighbor (unnamed) complained about the extra mowing and contended that Hill was mowing the city property in front of his own land on his property as well. Apparently, last year, this same neighbor unsuccessfully attempted to get Hill to shut down a not-so-noisy power generator used on cloudy days when solar power panels weren't as effective.

Council member Ryan Callen asked about the city's liability if someone gets hurt while mowing the lawn on city property. The city's legal counsel said the city's insurance carrier and the home-owner's property insurance would likely cover any problems.

"It is not uncommon to have people mow areas of city property," Kelly Klun said. "However, the issue here is the neighbor dispute, and the motion before you does not include any mowing on someone else's property."

Klun noted that the city never formally stated at the council level that a person cannot mow or maintain public areas.

"It is a matter of if and how the council wants to set policy on this," she said.

Council member Al Forsman said the matter came before the council because Hill's neighbor objected to his lawn mowing in front of his property.

"The intent of my motion on this is to not allow mowing in front of the neighbor's property, and that is what I'm supporting," he said. "I don't want to be in a situation where we are not supporting people who are trying to beautify our community. I think it is important that we do support those who want to beautify our community, and what Mr. Hill is doing here is beneficial to our community."

Council member Angela Campbell had another view. "I do not support Mr. Hill or his recommendation," she said. "I think the city does a good job, and I don't think a private interest should take precedence. Thank you."

Interim Mayor Chuck Novak said, "I don't want my neighbor mowing my boulevard in front of my house and that is the issue before us." He also wants Hill's mowing across his property on Sibley Drive to cease if and when the vacant city lots are sold and eventually developed.

Council member Heidi Omerza was at a loss as to why the council was addressing such a minor issue. "This is nothing more than a personality issue and this coming before the council is rather unfortunate," she said. "I don't mind solving this problem. I'm not blaming anyone. So many parties involved in solving an issue like this is unfortunate."

The council voted 6-1, with Campbell voting against, to allow Hill to mow city lawn around his property.

"Be nice to your neighbor," Novak told Hill. "We don't want to always have to settle your disputes down there."

USFS conducts helicopter training at Ely Airport

by KEITH VANDERVORT
Ely Editor

ELY – U.S. Forest Service crews used the Ely Airport for a helicopter training session last Friday as the trainees learned and refreshed their skills in working with rotary aircraft while fighting wildfires in the North Country.

Eric Holzem, USFS Helitack supervisor for District 9, including the Kawishiwi District, oversaw the training as eight students on the ground performed training drills in cargo transport via external load.

“The skills are needed for transport into and out of remote sites for fire suppression, or building projects in areas that are hard to reach any other way,” he said.

Materials were lowered to the ground by tether from a helicopter hovering overhead. A crew from Brainerd Helicopter Services, Inc., under contract with the USFS, was on hand last week and participated in reconnaissance and water suppression duties at the Rock Island Lake fire near Lake Two in the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness east of Ely.

Instead of delivering shovels, fire hoses, oxygen tanks and other necessary fire-fighting equipment, the helicopter crew used tires and other material to simulate the real-world experience.

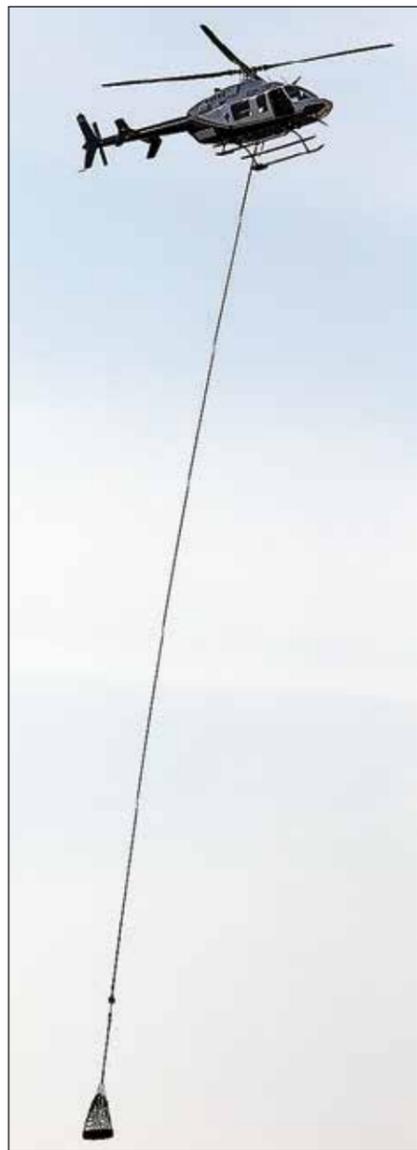

“We want to give the crews on the ground a real-world scenario in which they experience the helicopter hovering just above them as they perform their duties,” Holzem said.

Each of the students took turns calling in the aircraft by radio and relayed prevailing wind and simulated clearance and fire conditions on the ground. Other students, with aid from mentors, practiced hooking and unhooking the equipment from the tethered bundle lowered by the air crew.

Holzem said Forest Service personnel and aircraft will likely be stationed at the Ely Airport USFS facility for most of the summer as drought conditions remain and the fire danger persists.

U.S. Forest Service crews trained in air-to-ground equipment transfer skills last Friday at the Ely Airport. Wildfire aerial attack aircraft and personnel are expecting a long-term deployment as drought conditions continue in northern Minnesota this summer. photos by K. Vanervort

TOWER-SOUDAN HISTORICAL SOCIETY

TSHS receives $30,000 to restore Tower's Historic Fire Hall

TOWER- The Tower-Soudan Historical Society has received grant funding to replace the roof on the Tower Historic Fire Hall on Main Street. This was the first fire hall built on the Iron Range, in 1895, and is the oldest existing public building north of Duluth.

A $20,000 grant was made from the Department of Iron Range Resources and Rehabilitation Culture and Tourism Program through taxes paid by Minnesota's mining industry, and a $10,000 grant was made from the State of Minnesota from the Arts and Cultural Heritage Fund through the Minnesota Historical Society. The roof replacement will eliminate water infiltration and deter further building deterioration.

The roof replacement project is Phase 2 of the rehabilitation plan. Original doors and windows were restored as Phase 1 in 2019. Phase 3 will rehabilitate and repair the exterior masonry, planned for 2023. A $100,000 grant was recently awarded for Phase 3. An additional $40,000 is needed as additional match to a Minnesota Historical Society exterior masonry grant request due in September. Your donation of any size would be appreciated.

Please contact the Tower-Soudan Historical Society campaign co-chairs, Louise Gately at 515-229-8757, or Nancy Larson at 218-750-7514, with any questions. Donations can be mailed to the Tower-Soudan Historical Society, PO Box 465, Tower, MN 55790. TSHS is a 501(c)(3) organization. You can learn more at www.towersoudanhs.org. You can also fill out and mail the donation form printed below.

Tower's Historic Fire Hall tells the story of Tower as the first mining town on the Iron Range and offers the community a look into the social history of early iron ore mining in Minnesota. The hall was built in 1895 and included a cistern that held 30,000 gallons of water, filled using a pipe that extended from the building to the East Two River.

The building housed the city hall and jail, in addition to the fire department. It was used as a community center for social activities for many years after city hall and the jail were relocated in 1935. It was sold to a private party and leased to businesses after the civic center was built in the 1970s. It is listed on the National Register of Historic Places for its significance in the theme of social history.

The building, vacant from 2008 until 2015, was purchased by the Tower-Soudan Historical Society with support from the Iron Range Resources and Rehabilitation. Its unique features tell a story of the early years of Tower's development as the first mining boom town, when wooden structures were built on crowded lots in a city without water and plumbing infrastructure. After a series of dangerous fires in 1891, city officials purchased a horse-drawn steam-powered fire engine built by the Ahrens Manufacturing Co. The steam fire engine, the "James Tippet", named after the Tower mayor, served Tower and the surrounding area until it was retired in 1928.

The "Tippet" continued to be the featured attraction in Tower's Fourth of July parade for many decades and will be the featured centerpiece in the restored historic fire hall.

The restored fire hall will serve as a museum to tell the story of the early days when the Tower Harbor was a transportation hub and bustling commercial center with a hotel, outfitters, and a boat builder. Steamboats ferried train passengers to logging camps and resorts which were only accessible by water, thus pioneering Minnesota's resort and tourism industry on Lake Vermilion in the early part of the 20th century, several decades before tourism became an important industry throughout the state of Minnesota.

MESABI TRAIL

Tower-to-Ely segment should be complete by end of next summer

The Mesabi Trail's final segment, through Kugler Township, now set for completion in 2023

by MARSHALL HELMBERGER
Managing Editor

REGIONAL— For more than 20 years, the Mesabi Trail has been a work in progress, a goal with a completion date far off in the future. But barring an unforeseen roadblock, all 135 miles of paved bike path from Grand Rapids to Ely could be officially completed in just two years.

"Done. I mean done-done," said Bob Manzoline, who has spearheaded the trail-building process with the patience of Job as it wound its way to completion, segment-by-segment. "We knew this day would eventually come," he said.

They're getting there thanks, in part, to a busy 2021 construction season on the trail. An eight-mile stretch from "downtown" Embarrass to just short of the intersection of Hwy. 135 and County Rd. 26 has now been paved and Manzoline said he expects final cleanup along the route to be completed by the end of the month.

REVIVAL

The comeback of cranes

North America's oldest bird species has become a common resident of our region once again

A primeval sound has returned with a vengeance to the North Country this year. Sandhill cranes, which had once bordered on extirpation in Minnesota and had been rare for a time throughout their range, have returned in sizable numbers to our region over the past decade. This year, with severe drought to our west, they have been showing up all across the area in the most significant numbers in decades.

For many humans, the bugling call of the sandhill crane harkens back to prehistory. It's a sound that was heard across much of North America going back millions of years to a time before humans even walked on this continent. In fact, sandhills are believed to be the oldest bird species in North America, having existed in their present form for more than 2.5 million years, dating back to the Pliocene era. That's about twice as old as the next oldest bird species.

It was the arrival of humans, particularly Europeans, that nearly pushed sandhills into oblivion. Market hunters in the 1800s and early 1900s slaughtered untold numbers of virtually every kind of wildlife that inhabited the U.S., driving some, most notably the passenger pigeon, into extinction. The slaughter decimated the populations of North America's two crane species, with the largest, the whooping crane, still at risk of extinction even though the population is beginning to slowly rebuild. Sandhill crane populations never dipped as low, which has helped them recover more quickly.

Cranes take a relatively slow approach to reproduction, which has made their return a longer process. Unlike many short-lived species, which have lots of offspring, cranes typically raise only one or two colts per year. What's more, cranes will spend the first four to five years of their life as non-breeding juveniles. In fact, the pair of cranes pictured here are juveniles, which are almost certainly not nesting this year. The juveniles can be recognized by their cinnamon brown plumage, which will turn a light gray once they reach breeding age.

Sandhills, like a number of larger water-related fowl, will typically mate for life and they can live 20 years in the wild so with any luck they're able to raise plenty of young during their lifetime. Like other cranes around the world, they attract their mates through elaborate dances that include wing-flapping, bowing, jumping, and tossing of sticks and grass. Sandhills are quite vocal, often noisy even. It's part of their highly developed communication system that helps to keep their family units together, signals danger and reinforces pair-bonds.

Minnesota actually has two separate populations of sandhill cranes. In northwestern Minnesota, sandhills are associated with the mid-continent population, which summers across a vast range that stretches all the way to far northeastern Siberia, and winters on the Texas Gulf Coast, while the east-central Minnesota population is part of the eastern population of sandhills, which winters in northern and central Florida. It's most likely birds from the east-central population which have spread into our region in recent years, although the drought conditions to our west could have pushed some of those birds our way as well.

Most sandhill cranes breed to our north, with their summer range extending all the way to the Canadian and Alaskan arctic. They breed only in about ten northern U.S. states, including Alaska, and Minnesota is starting to have one of the more significant breeding populations of any state.

While cranes are often associated with water, they do spend a lot of time on dry land as well. In our area, they feed often in open fields, particularly around the Cook area, where the landscape is more a mix of fields and forest. While cranes are mostly after insects, amphibians, snakes, small mammals or birds, they also will eat crop seed, like corn or beans, which has created a conflict with some farmers, particularly among the mid-continent population.

But sandhills also take advantage of places where they're unlikely to impact human activity, such as in our

Wildflower Watch

This week's featured flower
MOTHERWORT

Here in the North Country, Motherwort, Leonurus cardiaca, is found almost exclusively in disturbed locations, like roadsides or gravel pits.

It's a member of the mint family and like many mints its small lavender flowers grow in a tight circle around the leaf axils (where the leaves connect to the stem). It's among the largest of the mints found in Minnesota and can often grow five feet tall.

Its leaves have three obvious lobes, which are more prominent in older leaves.

As its name suggests, it is known to have medicinal uses revolving around pregnancy. In fact, it's known to stimulate contractions in women in labor and can also reduce bleeding post-labor.

Fishing reports

Ely area

Many anglers struggled finding walleyes this last week but several groups had no issue, not only catching good numbers, but catching several trophy walleyes. These groups found walleyes in 7-12 feet of water, over large boulder flats, very early in the morning. Leeches and crawlers, fished on a spinner rig or tipped on a jig, was very effective. Orange, gold and chartreuse have been hot colors this last week. The trolling bite has started on several lakes. This has largely been an evening bite where anglers are using deep diving crankbaits over deep water.

Bass fishing has remained excellent for anglers this last week. Topwater and soft plastics continue to be the way to go and early morning or late in the evening have been the best times to fish. Anglers have been finding bass on large boulder flats in 10 feet of water or less.

Panfish anglers have been finding good numbers and sized sunfish in shallow weed beds. Here anglers are using small leeches or wax worms under a bobber. Crappie anglers have been finding crappies hanging out over deep water next to weed beds. Anglers here have been using jigs and twisters or crappie minnows.

SUMMER FIRE SEASON

Quick response snuffs BW blaze

Rock Island Fire burns just 1.5 acres

by KEITH VANDERVORT
Ely Editor

BWCAW — Forest Service firefighters responded quickly last Wednesday to another fire in the Boundary Waters, the latest located about a mile southwest of Lake Two.

The fire, believed to be sparked by a lightning strike, burned about an acre and a half before crews brought it under control.

A “Fire Boss” float-plane and a helicopter did most of the work, dropping approximately 30,000 gallons of water on the fire to slow its growth. As many as ten firefighters were also dropped off by aircraft near Lake Two in the evening of June 30 so they could respond to the fire on the ground the next morning.

By last Friday afternoon, firefighters achieved 100 percent containment of the fire. Personnel contained the blaze to a line around the perimeter to keep it from spreading. Crews continued to secure and mop up areas of the fire.

Mop up efforts continued throughout Saturday. One technique used, according to officials, was “bone piling” or taking all logs that still had heat in them, isolating the parts with heat, and piling them to burn in black areas of the fire. This technique works well when there is not much water available and allows crews to rely less on water pumps.

Due to drought conditions in northern Minnesota, fire crews will remain on call for initial attack on any new starts that occur.

Minnesota’s forests are primed by record heat and drought for an abnormal summer fire season and especially problematic fire behavior. The Superior National Forest has additional crews and engines available in the Kawishiwi District to assist.

but Manzoline is hopeful that the end is in sight on what has proven to be a difficult stretch. While the former rail grade between Tower and Embarrass would have been a natural location for the trail, a handful of landowners have resisted its use for that purpose. That will force the trail to cover a portion of the stretch from County Rd. 26 to Tower along the Hwy. 135 right-of-way.

Manzoline has an engineer working on the segment and he’s already lined up $1.3 million in state bonding money and is preparing the grant request for another $1 million to finish the roughly six-mile stretch. That remaining funding won’t be available, however, until the Legislature gives the green light next year. With that timeline in place, Manzoline said he would expect to have the engineering and environmental review work completed by late 2022, with final construction in 2023.

Meanwhile, work on the hotly-anticipated stretch of trail from Tower to Ely is expected to be completed by next summer. Work is close to complete on a section of trail from the Hwy. 169 rail overpass, west of Ely, to the County Rd. 88 cutoff. And a final MnDOT review is nearing completion for the remaining segment into Ely. Manzoline said he hopes to have that segment under construction this year.

Work got underway last week on the still-missing segment from the intersection of Hwy. 169 and Trygg Road to the Eagles Nest Town Hall. That should be completed yet this year. That leaves only a small piece still missing between the highway underpass and the town hall, which should be built by next year at the latest. That would be the last stretch needing completion between Tower and Ely.

Completion of the trail won’t put Manzoline out of a job, however. Even as he hopes to put the finishing touches on the trail in 2023, he’s already working on reconstruction of the first segment of the trail, built between Tower and Soudan some 20 years ago. Manzoline said the $600,000 in funding for that reconstruction is now in place, with $300,000 from state legacy bonding, $150,000 from a federal trails grant, and the remaining $150,000 from the rail authority that oversees the Mesabi Trail.

Manzoline had originally hoped to rebuild the trail this year but, as usual, the project is more complicated than one might expect. Much of the original trail was built atop forced wastewater mains that serve both Tower and Soudan and the communities’ joint wastewater board has decided to replace about 20 aging manholes along the route in conjunction with the trail project. Wastewater manager Matt Tichel said the price tag for the manhole replacement is estimated at $409,000, an amount the wastewater board is still working to raise. Tichel said the wastewater board has already met with Manzoline to coordinate the work and has agreed to use the same engineer to design and oversee both the manhole replacements and the trail reconstruction. Tichel said he’s hoping to have the project out for bid by this fall, with project completion by next spring. That will push the reconstruction of the bike trail out to next year.

large peatlands. They have become regulars, for example, in the Lost Lake Swamp. It was about ten years ago, that I first started hearing their bugling calls from out in that large peatland from our high ridge on the swamp’s east side. At first, I assumed they were migrants, but now I hear their calls almost daily throughout the summer, so it’s clearly a resident population.

Sandhills are large birds, so they’re easy to spot, even at a distance. They’re among the very largest birds you’ll find in Minnesota, standing about five feet tall, with a wingspan of nearly seven feet. You might have a tough time getting close to them, however. They have excellent eyesight and tend to be quite wary of humans.

The return of sandhills to our area is just another example of the way that conservation regulations benefit wildlife, and us as well. Humans have long associated cranes with good fortune, happiness, creativity, and long life. Who wouldn’t hope to see a bit more of that?
