Road crews idled as they wait for spring weather

Officials say 1,500 miles of gravel roads worst in recent memory

by MARSHALL HELMBERGER
Managing Editor

REGIONAL — A seemingly never-ending series of snowfalls in April has left county roads across the region in the worst condition in recent memory, and St. Louis County public works officials say there's little they can do about the situation other than wait.

With 1,500 miles of gravel roads, which provide home access to thousands of county residents, the current conditions haven't gone unnoticed, acknowledged Brian Boder, with the county public works office in Pike Lake. County out about the situation so people understand.

Class teaches ancient craft from Ukraine

by JODI SUMMIT

SOUDAN - John and Denise Lindquist are not Ukrainian, but they are fascinated with the traditional Ukrainian art of pysanky, colorful hand-painted eggs that feature complicated geometric and floral designs.

"It was a good time to offer this class," said Denise, who along with John taught a beginners' class to about a dozen women at the Vermilion Park Inn, that raised some funds for the Lake Vermilion Cultural Center.

Pysanky have been in the news all month. With the focus on the war in Ukraine, people around the world have been teaching and learning this ancient craft, which traditionally issaid to be a sign of peace.

Most who signed up for the class were very aware of the cultural focus, and conversation often wandered to the fates of families whose lives and homes were being destroyed by the current Russian invasion.

CITY OF ELY

Ely organizations awarded federal COVID-19 funds

City council approved total distribution of $360,000

by KEITH VANDERVORT
Ely Editor

ELY — Four local non-profit organizations will share some of the $360,000 allocated to the city of Ely from the federal American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA). Another one-third of the funds will be set aside for the city's broadband project, and the remaining one-third will be used to fund local infrastructure projects.

City council members Tuesday night approved the recommendation from the budget committee for the distribution of what they dubbed "COVID money" totaling $122,259 to the following organizations: Ely Area Food Shelf, $38,900; Happy Days Preschool, $6,000; Ely Community Resource, $56,000; and Ely Area Senior Citizens, $21,359.

The amount of money was determined by funding request letters sent by the organizations describing their loss of revenue associated with the coronavirus pandemic and the public protocols and shutdowns put in place at the time, according to Clerk-Treasurer Harold Langowski.

Council member Heidi Omerza questioned the process used by the budget committee to determine the allocation of the ARPA funds.

"These are all great organizations in Ely, but they are the 'haves' and there are a lot of 'have nots,'" she said.

Committee member Paul Kess said the city solicited non-profit organizations to apply for the funds.

Quiltmaker’s Gift auditions to be held Sunday, April 24 in Ely

ELY - Auditions for the Quiltmaker’s Gift will be held on Sunday, April 24 from 5:30 - 7 p.m. in the basement of the First Presbyterian Church at 226 E Harvey St. in Ely. This production was the inaugural theatrical event in late January 2019 with four sold-out performances at Ely’s Historic State Theater.

Organizers are seeking actors who can sing, specifically for the roles of The Quiltmaker, the King’s soldiers and chorus members. If you cannot attend or have questions, please call Director Laurie Kess at 218-349-7237.

Performances for the show are planned for Friday and Saturday, July 15-16 at 7 p.m., and a matinee at 1 p.m. on Sunday, July 17 to be held at Ely’s Historic State Theater

The show is a one-act family musical based on the best-selling book of the same name written by Jeff Brumbeau, first published in 2000. To date, more than 750,000 copies have been sold worldwide and the book has been translated into Chinese, Korean, Greek, and German. The book’s illustrator, Gail de Marcken, lives in Ely.

The book inspired a sequel, The Quiltmaker’s Journey, two books on quilting, and a number of theatrical productions including a ballet with the University of Utah’s Children’s Dance Theater.

The Ely Rotary Club and Lake Country Power are supporting the shows. Community activities being organized for this summer will focus on high-school seniors since school is not in session. The Ely Public Library is developing an exhibit and a youth fabric project for mid-July.

Skywarn Spotter training set for Monday, April 25

MT IRON – Mesabi Wireless Amateur Radio Club (MeWA) will be hosting free Skywarn Spotter training presented by the National Weather Service on Monday, April 25 at 6:30 p.m. at Messiah Lutheran Church in Mt. Iron.

The training is open to the public. As a volunteer, help keep communities safe by providing timely and accurate reports of severe weather to the National Weather Service. This training may be especially beneficial for police, fire, dispatchers, EMS, public utility workers, coaches, farmers, tow-truck drivers, or those responsible for protecting others.

The free training will cover basics of thunderstorm development, fundamentals of storm structure, identification of potential severe weather features, information and reporting procedures and basic severe weather safety.

MeWA is a local amateur radio operators club. For questions, please call John Lindquist at 218-750-6614 or visit <https://n0agx.com/mesabi-wireless>.

Cook Timber Days set for June 10-12

COOK - The Timber Days committee announced the Cook Annual Timber Days festival is being planned for June 10-12. Dozens of food and craft vendors will again be in Cook all weekend as well as favorite shows and events enjoyed during Timber Days 2021. New entertainment is also being added. The spectacular fireworks show will be on Saturday night, June 11 and Timber Days will culminate with a huge parade on Sunday, June 12.

Mesabi Community Band concert on Thursday, April 28 at 7 p.m.

EVELETH - The Mesabi Community Band, under the direction of Larry Baker and Bill Lavato, will present “A Spring Renewal Concert,” on Thursday, April 28 at 7 p.m. at the Eveleth City Auditorium. The band is in its 49th year. The concert will feature selections including marches: Americans We, The Klaxon, and The Minnesota March. Additional selections will include Procession of the Nobles, Yorkshire Ballad, October, West Side Story, and others.

Donations will be accepted for Ukrainian refugees in Poland. A band member’s son teaches at the American School in Warsaw, Poland, and is working with local relief agencies to distribute funds where needed.

EARTH FEST

Earth Fest to be held Saturday, April 23 in Mt. Iron

MT IRON- Earth Fest free activities will be held on Saturday, April 23 from 9 a.m. – 3 p.m. on the Hwy. 169 corridor in Mt. Iron. Activities include a local marketplace, silent auction, demos, exhibits, speakers, phenology walk, local lunch by Go Figur’s, and music by Nadair (Sara Softich and Ryan Lane).

This is an annual event initiated by the Iron Range Partnership for Sustainability. It is the largest sustainability fair on the Range, attracting over a thousand participants. Earth Fest connects people from all over the Range around topics that foster a future that our children can be proud of. What do we need to do in order to leave the Iron Range in better shape than we found it? How can we meet our needs without compromising our grandchildren’s ability to meet theirs? These are questions addressed at Earth Fest. You are invited you to join the larger conversation.

Saturday’s feature presentation is by Macalester College’s Dr. Roopali Phadke on “Recycling Precious Metals from e-waste.” The concluding presentation will be by Robert Blake of Solar Bear, “Native Nations Leading the Way in Renewables.” The phenology walk will be led by KAXE’s resident phenologist John Latimer at 12:30 p.m. starting at the Merritt Elementary School entrance.

Presentations, exhibitors, vendors and activities are spread throughout three different buildings on Enterprise Dr. and Emerald Ave (located just off of Hwy. 169) at the Mt. Iron Community Center, Messiah Lutheran Church, and Merritt Elementary School. For more information, visit <https://www.irpsmn.org/earthfest>.

SUPPORTING ARTISTS

Northland Foundation awards Maada’ookiing grants to Indigenous individuals for community projects

REGIONAL - The Northland Foundation is pleased to announce individuals and projects awarded Mada’ookiing grants. The Mada’ookiing board met in March to review and approve $17,000 in funding.

Maada’ookiing, (“the distribution” in Ojibwe), is a Northland Foundation program to strengthen relationships with the Indigenous community, build partnerships with Native nations, and offer support for community members to expand capacity in northeastern Minnesota. A grant opportunity is offered three times each year, awarding up to $2,500 per grant for Tribal citizens, descendants, or those with kinship ties or an affiliation to Indigenous communities within the foundation’s geographic service area. Grant applications are accepted anytime on the online grant portal. The next application deadline is Sunday, May 15.

The March 2022 grantees are: Sarah Agaton Howes, for $2,500, to create an updated edition of the Nookomis Obagijigan Moccasin

Pattern Book, which will share the traditional practice of making moccasins; Sherelle Graves, for $2,500, to teach traditional quilt-making practices along with how they are used in ceremony and with Ojibwe language; Emily Smith, for $2,500, to support the preservation and sharing of Ojibwe culture through Big Drum ceremonies in the Sawyer area; Cheyanne Peet, for $2,500 to create opportunities for Anishinaabe women across generations to learn traditional quilt-making and foster healing; Gerald White, for $2,400, to create a series of videos that share history and techniques for making traditional Ojibwe style canoe paddles; Theodore DeFoe, $2,500, to provide programming for youth to share knowledge on the gathering and the use of birch bark and basswood in traditional ceremony and crafts; and Amber Reynolds, $2,000, to provide positive, enrichment opportunities to help people maintain sobriety.

The Northland Foundation, a publicly supported foundation, invests in people and communities to support a thriving region in seven northeastern Minnesota counties: Aitkin, Carlton, Cook, Itasca, Koochiching, Lake, and St. Louis, as well as Native nations sharing this geography: Bois Forte Band of Chippewa, Fond du Lac Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, Grand Portage Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, Leech Lake Band of Ojibwe (District I), and Mille Lacs Band of Ojibwe (District II). ## LIVE MUSIC

Mesabi Symphony Orchestra closes season with concerts April 23 and 24

REGIONAL – The Mesabi Symphony Orchestra (MSO) will close out its 2021-22 season with the proverbial bang on Saturday, April 23 at 7 p.m. in the Virginia Goodman Auditorium and on Sunday, April 24 at 2:30 p.m. in the Moose Lake Community School Auditorium.

Artistic Director and Conductor Ben Nilles commented, “This is going to be a patriotic concert featuring music from different countries.” Specifically, Finland will be represented by Sibelius’ Finlandia, Czechoslovakia by Dvorak’s Eighth Symphony, and Mexico by Arturo Marquez’s Danzon No. 2. All are exciting, accessible pieces, perfect for a first orchestra experience, or thousandth.

Don’t miss this world concert. Buy your tickets online at mesabisymphonyorchestra.org, or at the doors of the venues. As always, students are admitted free with a ticket from their music teacher(s). The website and the Orchestra’s Facebook page are both good places to learn more about MSO, the concerts, and so much more.

Operating support is made possible by the voters of Minnesota through grants from the Minnesota State Arts Board and the Arrowhead Regional Arts Council, thanks to a legislative appropriation from the arts and cultural heritage fund.

CAMPAIGN SEASON

GOP candidates to face off in District 3A primary

by MARSHALL HELMBERGER
Managing Editor

REGIONAL— For decades, the Republican challenger in a northeastern Minnesota legislative district was little more than a sacrificial lamb. But those times have changed and along with the GOP’s newfound competitiveness in the Arrowhead, has come real competition for the Republican endorsement in the general election.

For the first time in recent memory, at least two GOP candidates will be facing off in a primary election for the right to take on incumbent District 3A Rep. Rob Ecklund, DFL, of International Falls.

It’s likely to be a hard-fought contest, featuring Ely Mayor Roger Skraba and Bob Wolfe, a political newcomer from Loman, on the far western end of the sprawling legislative district.

A relative handful of GOP delegates assembled earlier this month at the North Woods School, where they voted 17-17 to endorse Wolfe. While the vote may appear to have been a tie, the delegates were weighted differently depending on the GOP vote totals in the most recent general election. Delegates from counties like Itasca and Koochiching, with more Republican voters than in St. Louis or Lake counties, were weighted more heavily, which allowed Wolfe to come away with the endorsement despite what appeared to be a tie vote.

Roger Skraba

Wolfe, who spent 40 years in the poultry industry in California before retiring, moved back to the border country about a year and a half ago, where he lives off-grid, using solar panels for electricity. Wolfe grew up in International Falls, where his family ran a hardware store but he said his family lost its business and was forced to move away after a downturn in the wood products industry.

Wolfe served in the Marine Corps before entering the poultry business. While a self-proclaimed

Bob Wolfe

“chicken dude” he was active in the California Poultry Federation, and is a past president of the organization. During that time, Wolfe said he did engage in some political lobbying in Sacramento, an experience which left a bad taste in his mouth. “I had enough of a glimpse to see that it was something I would like to do,” he said. “I’d like to try to be part of the solution. I don’t believe the government is being run the way that citizens want it to be run.”

Even so, Wolfe said he hadn’t considered running until he attended his precinct caucus earlier this year. “That’s when I was told there was no conservative candidate in the race,” he said. Wolfe said he’s a firm believer in the three “Ts” of the North Country economy, including taconite, timber, and tourism. “We’ve got the mineral deposits and we need to be capitalizing on that,” he said. Given his family’s previous experience in International Falls, he said he wants to support the timber industry to ensure that it survives. Wolfe is enthusiastic about the tourism attractions in the region. “It’s just a fabulous area. Outstanding fishing. Great trail riding.”

Living off-grid has been challenging, but fulfilling, said Wolfe, although it has made campaigning more challenging than it might otherwise be. While he produces his own electricity with solar photovoltaic panels, he still gets by without running water. “I haul my water in five-gallon buckets,” he said.

The party endorsement was likely essential to Wolfe’s hopes to make it to the general election. He acknowledges he’s starting with “zero name recognition” and a very limited campaign war chest.

Skraba, by contrast, has been campaigning for office for decades, and has twice been elected as Mayor of Ely, the second-largest city in the district. Skraba said the party endorsement presents a challenge, but one he expects to overcome as the race moves forward to the Aug. 9 primary. “I’m hoping that folks in the district see the difference,” he said. “I’ve been here my whole life. People know me.”

And while Wolfe was busy laying claim to the conservative wing of the GOP, Skraba made it clear he would buck the GOP caucus at times if it’s in the best interests of the district. “I’m not going to be a Republican who wants to cut LGA, for example,” said Skraba. “If I’m in the caucus, I’ll explain how important it is to my community.”

Ely, as Skraba is aware, is heavily reliant on LGA, or Local Government Aid, to balance the city’s budget.

Naturally gregarious, Skraba has spent most of his work life as a wilderness guide in the Boundary Waters Canoe Area. Even so, he remains a vocal supporter of copper-nickel mining upstream of the wilderness.

He’s also had a few run-ins with federal authorities over the years, for a series of violations in the federal wilderness. While those incidents landed him in court, and slapped with various penalties, they appeared to only burnish his credentials for elected office with many in Ely.

COUNTY SCHOOLS

Board considers additional student support services

by DAVID COLBURN
Cook-Orr Editor

VIRGINIA- The St. Louis County School District was boosting its student support systems even before the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic. And as challenges to students’ social and emotional well-being have mounted over the past two COVID-scarred years, the district has continued to evaluate systems and consider more supports.

At their April 12 working meeting, ISD 2142 school board members heard about the newest addition to the district’s efforts to foster student success. Project AWARE is a special five-year initiative intended to pull all of the pieces together into a comprehensive mental health system focused on social-emotional wellness, mental health supports, and suicide prevention. AWARE stands for Advancing Wellness and Resiliency in Education.

Federally funded by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration of the Department of Health and Human Services, Project AWARE is a collaborative project of the Minnesota Departments of Education and Human Services that is being piloted in only six school districts in the state. The goal is to create an effective school-based mental health framework that can eventually be utilized throughout the state.

Project AWARE Mental Health Coordinator Alicia Isom, MSW, LGSW, told board members that educating staff about mental health concepts and support strategies will be integral to the project.

“We’ll be looking at just how we can educate teachers and professionals to understand what’s going on with some of the students who are really struggling, knowing how to manage and regulate their emotions.”

With the work of senior fellow of The Child Trauma Academy and internationally-recognized psychiatrist Bruce Perry providing the basic framework, Isom said she will be coordinating staff training that is rooted in neurobiology and how it is affected by adverse childhood experiences (ACES), experiences which are considered traumatic and detrimental to healthy social-emotional development. Perry’s neuro-sequential model, as it is called, is an integrated evidence-based approach to select and apply educational, enrichment, and therapeutic activities that match the needs and strengths of individual students.

“What (Perry) is seeing is that just learning about the neurobiology of the brain will help decrease behaviors,” Isom said. “Learning about where kids are at and that they’re not being spiteful intentionally has decreased behavior itself.”

“It’s been a challenging couple of years. People are stressed,” Superintendent Reggie Engebritson said of district staff. “As we roll this out, we’ll look at how to help teachers understand where we’re going so that they feel there’s some hope.”

Another aspect of the project is to ensure that various support systems are coordinated and aren’t needlessly duplicating services. Toward that end, Isom decided after coming on board in January that a school-by-school comprehensive assessment would be more effective than an overall district assessment, and she provided a sample of the 46-page assessment instrument to the board to inspect. Board members responded enthusiastically.

Remembering Earth Day

U.S. made tremendous environmental progress, but times have changed

It’s worth remembering on this April 22, otherwise known as Earth Day, just how far the United States has come in terms of its environmental progress. When the first Earth Day was celebrated back in 1970, many rivers in America were toxic sewers. Standing near the lower reaches of the St. Louis River near Duluth, in the 1970s, would make your eyes burn. Many species of wildlife were on the verge of extinction due to habitat loss or the spraying of toxic chemicals, like DDT. Smog choked many, if not most, of our major cities, and young children regularly ingested significant amounts of lead from the burning of gasoline. It’s worth considering that the trumpeter swans that now routinely grace Minnesota skies with their beauty, or the sandhill cranes, whose calls now commonly echo across North Country swamps and fields, were once nearly gone or greatly depleted. The Rainy River below International Falls, which was so toxic in the 1970s that few fish could survive, has been restored and the fishery is teeming once again. It was an environmental ethic demanded by the public back then, that brought countless improvements in our environment and quality of life. The litany of new laws penned, beginning in the 1960s and accelerating in the 1970s, set the stage for cleaning up our waters and our air, and taking steps to protect the critical habitat necessary for the survival of so many species. Laws like the National Environmental Policy Act, or NEPA, helped to ensure that environmental impacts are considered when undertaking major projects in the U.S. The Clean Water and Clean Air acts provided a regulatory framework that helps to hold polluters accountable when they despoil our public waters or the air we breathe. The Endangered Species Act provides for the protection and recovery of species before it’s too late. Despite the tremendous progress we’ve made, the prospects for the future of environmental protection in the U.S. and around the world, look increasingly cloudy. It’s worth noting that the landmark environmental bills mentioned just above were all passed nearly half a century ago, at a time when attitudes toward environmental protection in the U.S. were much different from today’s. Half a century ago, support for environmental protection was found across the political spectrum. Back in 1973, the Endangered Species Act was approved unanimously in the U.S. Senate and the House voted in favor, 355-4. Other major environmental laws enjoyed similarly lopsided margins in Congress. Republican President Richard Nixon signed many of them into law. Indeed, in the early years, Republicans often led the way in support of environmental protection. One of the earliest environmental laws, known as the Lacey Act, won passage in 1900 and protected many species of plants and wildlife from destruction for commercial purposes. At the time, countless herons, egrets, pelicans, swans, and other birds were being slaughtered commercially for their feathers and meat and many were close to extinction by the time Congress took action. The law was named for its chief author, John Lacey, an Iowa Republican. Times have certainly changed, as have the environmental challenges. While the United States made real progress in addressing environmental concerns a half century ago, we have struggled to respond to the single biggest environmental challenge humans have ever faced— climate change. That’s true, in large part, because one of our nation’s two major parties has turned disturbingly hostile to environmental protection. Indeed, none of the major environmental laws, passed in the last century, could possibly get past a Republican filibuster in the U.S. Senate today. They remain law only because Democrats would block any attempt at repeal. Perhaps the success of the environmental movement paved the way for its own derailment. Most of the landmark environmental laws have proven so effective that Americans can be forgiven for failing to recall the horrible environmental conditions found in so many parts of the country back in the 1950s and 60s. Yet Americans are increasingly experiencing the effects of climate change and the dramatic increase in the number and severity of extreme events. Climate change is reordering the natural world and threatens an entirely new round of mass extinctions that laws like the Endangered Species Act have little ability to combat. Yet there’s little reason to expect meaningful action out of Washington given the current state of our politics. While it’s worth celebrating our environmental successes on this Earth Day, we must make note of the fact that these successes are legacies of a political era that has long since disappeared. As we are faced with even greater environmental challenges today, it is very clear that America— both politically and culturally— is not up to the task.

Longing for Yesterday and some better springtime weather

An ode to our “springtime” weather to the tune of Yesterday:
Yesterday, winter seemed so far away.
Now it looks as though it’s here to stay.
Just another winter day.

Suddenly, there’s more snow than there used to be.
And the sun is something I rarely see.
As the wind is always blustery.

Why is it so awfully cold?
My lips have froze so I couldn’t say.
All of this seems so very wrong.
As I long for yesterday.

Yesterday, flowers grew in the warm sun’s rays.
Now I just see white with clouds of gray.
Oh, I believe in yesterday.

Why is there another low?
Bringing snow, and freezing rain?
I did something wrong.
Now I long for yesterday.

Yesterday, spring was here with summer not so far away.
I really want to put the shovel away.
Oh, I believe in yesterday.
Mm mm mm mm mm mm mm.

Were you there when it mattered?

Were you there? I was there when my children graduated from elementary school, and from high school. I was there when so many wonderful things happened in my life.
But I was not there when they crucified my Lord. When Kathy Siskar sang that song at the Tenebrae service on Good Friday, I felt myself overwhelmed by the pure terror of what our choir was singing about, the hideous torture and dehumanization of a wonderful, incredible man.

Nor was I there when the first slave ship arrived on the shores of a new America in 1619. I was not there, and I was so thankful I wasn’t. Nor was I there during the horrible era of Black slavery which still is imbedded in our culture today in our White supremacy. And as a White person I have the good luck of not having been there to witness the hangings, the beatings, the separation of families, the deaths because of no medical care. I did not see the laws prohibiting the education of Blacks, and the complete legal separation of the races, that caused such unseen trauma, invisible to Whites.
Nor was I there when my grandparents received a quarter section of Native American land for free. Nor was I there when a mass of Native men were hanged in Mankato, or in Duluth.
It is crucial that we White people recognize our power and relate with Blacks and Browns with kindness. Why? Because we believe in democracy where all are equal, where we believe God loves every person on earth equally, and where we can face the crimes that caused immense terror and trauma for so many people. Whether I was there or not, I am able to face our complicity as a White person. I need to be with those who “were not there” when their grandparents and parents were beaten and hanged and give up my whiteness and claim our humanness. I am here. I pledge to be kind to everyone. “The Lord sets a table before me, in the presence of my enemies,” to make peace. At his table it is easy to be kind.

U.S. needs to invest more in hydrogen

The Biden Administration plans to spend $8 billion to build four “hydrogen hubs.” It is part of the infrastructure legislation. It appears that Minnesota and its surrounding states will not be beneficiaries of the hydrogen hubs.
Unfortunately, two of the hubs are likely to use natural gas to produce hydrogen resulting in fossil fuel emissions, a provision supported by Senator Manchin of West Virginia.

Nevertheless, a couple of the hubs will focus on producing “green” hydrogen using renewable energy. The process emits no greenhouse gasses.
It is encouraging to see the Biden Administration recognizing hydrogen as an energy alternative. Hydrogen can be transported by pipeline, rail, trucks, and ships in a wide variety of container sizes, and can be used as fuel for factories, houses, cars, trucks, trains, ships, and airplanes.
The Administration is giving some recognition to the value of hydrogen as a fuel, which would reduce our dependence on the growing use of the national electric grid system. The grid is vulnerable to areas of failure that are produced by severe weather conditions, aging components, insufficient capacity, potential sabotage and from fast growing numbers of electric cars depending on the reliability of the grid. (There are approximately 287 million cars registered in U.S.)
Despite the fact, the Administration is beginning to recognize the importance of hydrogen, its efforts are a drop in the bucket, compared to massive subsidies they are intending to use to promote electric vehicles.
It is also a drop in the bucket compared to the pursuit of hydrogen technology development that other countries such as Saudi Arabia, China and Australia are pursuing. We are likely to end up depending on importation of hydrogen from these countries to meet our future energy needs, even though hydrogen is not a scarce resource, nor is it indigenous to these particular countries. Hydrogen is one of the most plentiful elements spread over the Earth.
We should have more than a few “hydrogen hubs” to establish a nationwide viable hydrogen industry to meet future prerequisite energy needs.

Family... you can't live with them

I am sending in this column from the Deep South, a region I have never visited before. I hadn’t seen my brother and his wife for six years, and his health has been poor, so we both felt it might be the last time we would see each other. They moved to Alexandria, Louisiana, from

Dallas two years ago to be near her family, so that was the first destination on my trip. My relationship with my brother has rarely been easy, so I had some concern about the visit, limiting it to four and a half days. Though only three years apart, we were not close, and I’ve spent a lot of energy throughout my life trying to figure him out. We were so disconnected, I have felt that we were like two only children that just happened to be in the same house, living very different realities. I hadn’t known until quite recently that he has Asperger’s Syndrome, which explained a lot of the difficulty that he has with social skills and dealing with the world generally. I felt compassion for him, but I also refused to be the dumping ground for his sarcasm and anger. I had hoped that we would be able to do better and have time to share and compare memories and stories, as he is the only living tether to my past. We each feel there is so much we don’t remember, and have seen where our distinct perspectives have imprinted quite different recollections, but he is the only other person who has experienced our family from the inside and the only witness to my childhood, so I value what he does recall. In fact, I have no contact with anyone who experienced our family from the outside either. I had unearthed a sketchpad that belonged to my father, which had some drawings and journaling in it, and I wanted to discuss it with my brother. There were also a few pages of writing in my mother’s handwriting tucked in between the pages.

I never anticipated my brother’s explosive reaction to my request to talk about our parents’ written thoughts. He just said he

Lake Country Power should take seasonal cabin owners into account

It is good that Lake Country Power held meetings in February this year at various locations within its boundaries, but unfortunately the meetings were not held in the summer so that seasonal residents could better participate. There should have been a virtual option for participation for those who were not in town that day or primarily use Lake Country Power at seasonal residences. The technology to do so exists. Some states require this option be offered at public meetings.

It is unfair for seasonal cabin users to subsidize year-round residents, especially those who live in more remote areas with higher maintenance costs. Besides lowering the monthly facility charge, we suggest a graduated rate structure with a lower base rate for minimal essential electricity use and higher rates for those who use more. Off-peak heating could be at a lower rate. We suggest 3-4 levels or tiers: 6 cents/kWh for the first 500kWh and then progressive higher rates for the next levels. Consider offering various packages or combinations of facility charges and electricity charges from which a customer could select. We also encourage Lake Country Power to offer broader incentives for solar photovoltaic and hot water. Lake Country Power should be more considerate of those who struggle to keep a cabin in the family given high property taxes.

The “community” is MIA at WELY

In mid-April of '95 word drifted through town that CBS icon Charles Kuralt was going to purchase Ely's radio station, WELY. Mike Hillman shared the news with me and a few others. He was not joking. On July 4, 1995, Gil Knight, Dave Huston, Mike and I went on-air and it was extremely exciting. We were sleep deprived, frazzled, and star struck but not yet sure what was to come.

CBS icon, host of CBS Sunday Morning, whose favorite place, one of them, was Ely, and Moose Lake. Kuralt and WELY were top news as other famous broadcasters stopped by to pay us a visit. That added to the rush and more all-nighters writing copy and news, choosing music and jingles. “Chopper Bob” helicopter traffic reports from above the Quetico-Superior, complete with sound effects, reported jammed portages, loose canoes, pile-ups down the Fernberg and an accident where a large motor home drove into the Kawishiwi River at Lake One thinking it was a drive-thru.

A lot of people came to town, all summer, testing our patience driving on Sheridan Street. Best of days. Kuralt didn't care much for the Smooth Jazz I was playing after 7 p.m. but he laughed at Chopper Bob. And Iron Mike's mix of folk music, poetry and quotes won him over.

What a time in our lives. Merchants had their own hour of chosen music. Mealey's relaxing dinner music played from 6 to 7 p.m. You wanted to tune in and listen to 94.5 AM. We even held a couple live radio Garrison Keillor-style shows at Washington Auditorium, reviewed by Duluth's Dominic Papatola, the now-retired critic for the St. Paul Pioneer Press. He loved it. We took donations and, again, it was the time of our lives.

But in radio, as in television and motion pictures, egos can go wild. A power trip took over at WELY when the smell of fame and notoriety consumed the boss. Firings and termination were a steady play back. Dozens of local volunteers, excited to be there and just wanting to contribute, were “let go.” I trained many to run the boards. Then, with a simple misunderstanding, Chopper Bob was missing in action, never to be heard again.

But it was the best community radio station. Personal messages were heavy and often funny. News was professional with Gil Knight as news director. Dave Huston, our engineer, read the newspaper with the best music, and I had a following with sounds from a Quiet Storm. Damn good contemporary jazz. One evening Jim Brandenburg called in to say he never expected to hear Pat Matheny and Lyle Mays as he was cruising into town. Best of days.

Almost 30 years later, what is playing on the station now? And who's on-air? One early morning recently my blood pressure rose when I tuned in and heard Kuralt's voice speak the call letters immediately following the trashiest of songs. How sad and, even more so, disrespectful. No more live requests Saturday polka music. Why was Polka Ron Forsman let go? Budget issues? Sell more advertising. As I tune in today, Saturday, no one is managing the station at 8:30 a.m. It's dead air. No Polka Ron. Does that bother anyone or is there so much streaming music to choose from that no one cares? WELY has become a computer-driven formulaic sound, with little resemblance to the live community-centered station it once was. Based on my informal survey of dozens of local citizens, the station has been turned off in most households. They don't care to listen anymore.

There are dozens of area residents who would love to volunteer and be on the radio, on our so-called community radio station, like in the old days. Unfortunately, with the exception of Trader Craig and DJ Hanson, it's a one-man show with little regard for the residents who matter the most. The end of the road comes, eventually.

Regional EMS study should be valuable

At the April 12 town board meeting, Greenwood Supervisors voted 5-0 to request proposals from various Emergency Medical Service consultants to do an unbiased, professional study, including recommendations, for a path toward a modern Advanced Life Support ambulance service for our region. The study itself will define the region and point out what the most likely options are. Greenwood's focus has purely been on the best possible well-being of folks in the area who dial 911 for an ambulance. I always keep in mind that “the patient comes first.” That's an easy guideline to follow.

The city of Tower and the other townships in the TAAS district should have nothing to fear from this unbiased, professional study. We hope there is cooperation from all once the chosen consultant begins work. That's important. Naturally included in the area to be studied will be Virginia, Cook and Ely.

It's been after considerable thought that Greenwood decided the best way forward to provide modern ambulance care in our area is by hiring an unbiased, professional EMS consultant to gather the facts and come up with recommendations.

Support our St. Louis County teachers

Throughout the pandemic, St. Louis County educators have dedicated themselves to educating our students. We have created and maintained safe, high-quality learning environments that kept students in school and educators in buildings.

Now, we are asking St. Louis County Schools to step up with a contract agreement that honors the work of school staff, and attracts and keeps the best educators for our students.

Our district can't afford to lose good teachers. Educators are at a breaking point—not just here, but across the state and nation. School districts are scrambling to hire and keep teachers and other school staff. The district's current offer would put St. Louis County educators' compensation behind similar districts in our area.

St. Louis County can afford to offer more than a 1 - 1.5 percent-increase in salary. That doesn't come close to covering the rate of inflation. There's $3.3 million in the district's rainy day fund—11 percent of the district's annual budget.

Our next step is mediation with the district on May 4. Our union believes we can reach a fair settlement, one that puts students first while acknowledging and respecting the efforts of staff.

St. Louis County educators have been working without a contract for nearly one year. We want to get our focus back where it belongs—in the classroom teaching the future generations of our communities.

ISD 2142 teachers are hard working

The teachers of ISD 2142 are some of the hardest working teachers I have ever met. I have had the privilege to work in the schools with these teachers for many years as PTO president, a classroom volunteer, a substitute, parent and friend. They are passionate and committed, some driving more than thirty miles one way to teach in our schools. Their goal is to give each student every opportunity possible to help them succeed. They are coming in early, working through lunch, and putting in long hours after school to accomplish this goal. These teachers put in extra hours on weekends and days off to grade papers, make lesson plans, and find resources to make learning fun and engaging for students, while constantly working around budgets and allotted funds to achieve the best learning experience possible. Sometimes they pay for these opportunities and resources out of their own pockets. The teachers of ISD 2142 see students at their best and worst every day. Handling social and behavioral issues that disrupt classroom learning and listening to the cares, concerns and problems that students face every day. At the end of the day, they are physically and emotionally exhausted, but they continue to teach because that's where their heart is. A passion to see the students in our communities learn and be successful, to graduate and go into the world and make it a better place.

The teachers of ISD 2142 deserve to be compensated for their time and the extra efforts they put into their jobs, going above and beyond their job qualifications. This compensation will show that they are valued and appreciated in the community for all their efforts and ensure that our students will have these wonderful, hardworking, committed teachers for years to come.

didn't want to dig into the past, saw no benefit in it, and was very angry when I asked why. That incident clearly showed how we reacted to our upbringing differently. Our parents were very concerned with “looking good,” and my father did not cope with unpleasant emotions, so there was a lot of pretense along with suppressed emotions and “cold” anger. I was the kid with the radar always on alert to figure out what was going on, so I became the adult who wants to discuss and process everything out in the open because that feels safer. My brother followed my dad's lead and prefers to stuff feelings down and walk out of the room or situation or relationship because that feels safer to him. So, we each are a threat to the other. And we were on Day One. I was wishing I'd opted for a three-day visit.

We did have some good moments, but it never felt really relaxed and easy. He resented any expression of concern for or discussion of his health, exhibiting quite a bit of denial. More than once he went from zero to full-blown anger in micro-seconds, misinterpreting what I had meant or even hearing incorrectly what I actually said. By Day Four, I decided I would just pack up and leave in the morning, exploring the area a bit on my own and catching my flight in the afternoon. I had a wonderful Louisiana lunch with crawfish and beignets and enjoyed the local art museum, wishing we could have done that together because we both enjoy art exhibits, but not for a moment regretting stepping out of the emotional roller coaster.

I did have some good talks with his wife. In fact, I spent more time talking with her than my brother. On that last morning she said that his angry reactions had been getting steadily worse, and she was concerned he might be in the early stages of Alzheimer's. I knew he was feeling sad, too, because he wanted the visit to go well and had done some very thoughtful planning beforehand to ensure my comfort, but he just couldn't control his reactions, and I couldn't find a way to get through to him without triggering more negative reactions. It was very exhausting.

In planning my trip, I intentionally scheduled my brother first and my good friends in Mississippi second. I've known Susie for 35 years, and she's like a dear sister. We mirror each other in many ways, particularly in our persistent fascination with and need to understand how the world works, meaning what makes people tick, how do organizations and communities function, and, most importantly, how can we create positive change. Sometimes—often times these days—that means trying to discern meaning in chaos while keeping a grip on sanity in a world that often feels berserk. Susie and I can chew on a subject until all the flavor's gone.

We're also very comfortable with each other's differences. She is a professor of chemistry and can get passionate about hydrogen bondings, which all sounds like Greek to me. But she's an intuitive, creative, sensitive person, and we flow from one topic to the next and one activity to the next, just enjoying ourselves and each other's company. Her husband is a perfect match for her, also a scientist, also a creative, smart, curious, inventive, accepting, and loving person who wants to leave the world a better place.

He welcomes me into their life and has become a good friend. We get each other's humor and laugh a lot.

Coming from my brother's to my friends' home felt like escaping from a gloomy, gray unsafe mental ward into a warm, sunshiny nest of welcome, acceptance, and friendship. I will always be sad that my brother struggles to make friends and that he and I have not been able to figure out how to be easy with each other, but I am eternally grateful for the wonderful friends I have been so lucky to have in my life.

I found a fitting quote this week from Siobham Shaw: “The Easter egg symbolizes our ability to break out of the hard, protective shell we've surrounded ourselves with.” May we all be so blessed and have loving others around us to help us hatch.

ly and indicated that they would like to see the results for individual schools. “If you think about my role, I'm really kind of a case manager for the schools,” Isom said. “I'm trying to figure out how to strategically plan and assess a school's readiness for training. I'm really looking at each school individually and thinking about who is ready for this, just like we would do in a classroom when somebody's ready to learn information.”

Isom also noted that one crucial element in ISD 2142 being selected as a pilot district for Project AWARE was the county's suicide rate among young people.

“St. Louis County has had a higher number, unfortunately, of suicides between the ages of ten and 24 for the last ten years, so that is also a reason we received this grant,” she said.

Project AWARE

won't be focused solely on in-school resources, Isom said, but will also look at how schools interface with community mental health resources to help students.

“I do think we're on the right track,” Engebritson said. “It's exciting, and it's exciting that it's for five years.”

EASTER EGG FUN

Family fun

TOWER- The Tower Fire Department sponsored this year's Easter Egg Hunt on April 16 at the Herb Lamppa Civic Center. The event was back after being canceled the past two years. About 1,000 plastic eggs were scattered on the grounds, but they were quickly picked up by all the kids who attended. There was plenty of candy and prizes for all. The Easter Bunny was there to hand out even more candy, and children had the opportunity to decorate an Easter egg cookie.

Zup's Grocery donated hot dogs and chips for the event.

NORTH WOODS SCHOOL

State tests help shape school's curriculum

by DAVID COLBURN
Cook-Orr Editor

FIELD TWP- It's testing time for North Woods School students, specifically the annual Minnesota Comprehensive Assessment tests of reading, mathematics, and science.

Students in fourth through sixth grades were taking the computerized assessment on Monday, and eighth graders were scheduled to take the math assessment later in the week.

Reading and math tests are typically administered to students in third through eighth grades, and high school students in tenth grade take the reading MCA and students in eleventh grade take the math MCA. The Science MCA is administered to students in fifth and eighth grades and in the high school grade when students take a life science or biology course.

In the digital age, the days of using a No. 2 pencil to carefully fill in ovals on a paper score sheet are gone. Virtually all of the students take the computer-based tests online, except for those who need special testing accommodations. The online tests are designed to adapt their questions as students move through assessment. For example, a student's answer to one math question will help to determine what the next question presented to the student will be. The assessments are aligned with the Minnesota Academic Standards developed by the state Department of Education.

COVID disruptions

When the COVID-19 pandemic hit the state in March 2020, education was severely disrupted by transitioning to a system of distance learning that had to be quickly cobbled together by school personnel who were mostly unfamiliar with wholesale online education. With family routines also thrown into disarray, the department canceled MCA testing that was scheduled for that year.

State schools operated under Safe Learning Plans for the 2020-21 academic year, employing a variety of in-person, hybrid, and distance learning models as dictated by community case and transmission levels for COVID-19. Even when in-person learning was taking place, schools had to offer the option of distance learning for families, in many cases creating additional strain on classroom teachers. Students and staff were masked and social distancing measures were implemented to lessen the likelihood of COVID transmission. Students exposed to a case of COVID-19 would be isolated and miss class time until cleared to return to school.

The MCAs were administered in late spring of 2021, and when the results were tabulated, it was clear that the pandemic had taken its toll on student learning. Statewide, the percentage of students reading at grade level dropped to 53 from 60 in 2019. Steeper drops were seen in math and science performance. Similar results were seen nationwide, with one comprehensive study indicating that on average, U.S. elementary and secondary students came to kids re-engaged with academics."

But getting back to reading, math, science and more wasn't going to be as simple as stepping back into a classroom for many.

"With two years of pandemic isolation for many of our kids, and sort of a sense of the unknown, social-emotional learning has been a critical component to this school year," Vukmanich said. "The social emotional part of kids coming back into school, making sure that they're all feeling supported, and that our staff are also feeling supported, is just as important a component of success as the engagement with academics."

Many kids had to relearn some of the basic social norms important to group instruction, such as taking turns and paying attention. Additional stress and uncertainty from the pandemic left others with negative feelings that might play out in isolation for one child and acting out for another. All of the staff worked to create a learning environment that was supportive of children's needs and supportive of learning.

Formal academic assessments like the MCA are often a source of increased stress in schools, but Vukmanich said the students were well prepared for them.

"Our teachers do a really great job of preparing kids for the tests," he said. "They teach to the standards and get kids emotionally ready by not overemphasizing the importance of the test. We want and encourage our kids to do their best, but we don't want them to feel like it's a point of stress for them."

While individual student results are given to parents, Vukmanich said the MCA is less about individual student performance, which is measured in multiple ways throughout the year, and more about providing another measurement for school improvement.

"We look at the MCA more from a standpoint of looking at our student scores to find places where we need to improve our instruction," he said. "It's another tool, another assessment we can use to inform instruction."

Vukmanich said he anticipates the school will be finished with all of its MCA assessments by early May.

Rescuers working hard to retrieve 18 abandoned dogs

KABETOGRAMA- Volunteers have been making some headway in an extraordinary effort to corral a group of at least 18 dogs that were abandoned around April 5 along Ash River Trail between Orr and Kabetogama, but they could still use some help.

Four puppies that were among those abandoned were rescued immediately and placed in a shelter or new homes. The remaining dogs scattered, and as of Wednesday, April 20 nine had been recovered.

The remaining dogs have been seen as far south as Cusson, west of Littlefork, and north to International Falls. One was rescued in Ontario after crossing the Rainy River and is now back in the US with rescuers.

Volunteer groups from The Retrievers, Lost K9, and Safe Hands Rescue have provided people, traps, and other resources to help, and foster/rescue groups like Adopt A Husky Minnesota are providing temporary shelter for the animals.

A Facebook page, Ash River Abandoned Dogs Rescue Updates, has been set up to report on the progress of the search and rescue effort. A GoFundMe page has been set up at <https://www.gofundme.com/ahs-river-abandoned-dogs-rescue> for contributions to defray the expenses incurred by those who have been actively involved in the wide-ranging effort.

If you believe you have spotted a wayward dog, organizers ask that you not post the sighting publicly to the rescue update page. Instead, a private message can be sent through the page or directly to volunteers Amanda Vogel or Sabrina Murray. As volunteers are trying to get spotted animals accustomed to an area as they try to trap them, people should not try to approach the dogs themselves but instead send information describing the dog and where and when it was seen.

COMMUNITY NOTES

Clay and writing classes are NWFA events in May

COOK- Classes and workshops will begin again in May at the Northwoods Friends of the Arts.

Two classes, one featuring ceramics and the other writing, will be featured at the NWFA Gallery at 210 S River St. in Cook.

"Curious and Creative Clay and Glaze" will be taught by Lyn Reed in two Saturday sessions on May 21 and 28, both scheduled from 9 a.m. to noon.

Participants will use clay and slab building techniques to create a cylinder that can be shaped into a mug, a vase, or other container during the first session. The second week will be devoted to glazing the creations. Objects will then be taken off-site for firing and then returned to the gallery for pick up.

The course fee is $10 for NWFA members and $20 for non-members. A $25 materials fee will be paid to the instructor. Class size is limited to ten.

Also on Saturday, May 21, Ellie Larmouth will reprise her popular Writers Gathering from 2 to 4 p.m. at the gallery. The writing workshop is free and open to all. Registration for the clay class can be completed at the gallery during regular business hours on Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., by emailing nwfamn.org@gmail.com, or by mail at NWFA, P.O. Box 44, Cook MN 55723.

VHHP to Hold Fiesta Night on May 5

COOK- Virgie Hegg Hospice Partners Inc, invites the public to join them for dinner and a guest speaker on May 5 at the Fiesta Night fundraiser.

Fiesta Night will be at the Cook Community Center on Thursday, May 5, with social hour featuring festive mocktails beginning at 5:30 p.m. Dinner will feature a taco bar. Raffle baskets will be available to bring in funds to support VHHP's mission.

Dinner tickets are available for $25 per couple in advance from any board member or at the door for $30 per couple. More information is available at www.vhhp.org.

National Day of Prayer to be observed on May 5

COOK- The National Day of Prayer on Thursday, May 5 will be observed in Cook at noon by the flag in park by City Hall.

Pastor Linda Freeman, along with other Christian leaders and area citizens who value the privilege of public prayer, will gather to join in praying aloud for our country, its institutions, all of its people, and the help God offers to people everywhere throughout the world who acquaint themselves with the Creator and turn to Christ.

National days of prayer have been celebrated since 1775, and communities throughout the nation will be celebrating 70 years of the modern-day National Day of Prayer.

Come, lift your hearts and minds in prayer, and check with your home church to see if an evening prayer session can also take place for those who work day shifts.

For additional information, call Pastor Freeman at 218-410-1768.

Trinty church community meal to be April 28

COOK- Trinity Lutheran Church will be serving its monthly community meal on Thursday, April 28 from 4 to 6 p.m. The menu will be scalloped potatoes and ham with sides. It's free, open to the public, and served as a drive-through. The church extends special thanks to Matt Zupancich at Cook Zup's.

CORONAVIRUS

North Country bucks COVID-19 trend for now

by DAVID COLBURN
Cook/Orr Editor

REGIONAL- While St. Louis County continues to average about two dozen new COVID cases a day, according to the seven-day case average, for the time being North Country residents can point to their neighbors to the south as the source.

For the first time since mid-July 2021, last week’s state report for the six zip codes monitored by the Timberjay showed only two new cases, both in Embarrass. The report also brought to an end the region’s longest streak of consecutive weeks with new cases, also dating back to last July, as none were recorded for Ely in the April 14 report.

The numbers are consistent with those on the county’s COVID dashboard of regional cases per 100,000 people, which, due to reporting and verification practices, lags by a couple of weeks. Between March 20 and April 3, that rate in the Duluth area rose from 94 to 110.7. The northern part of the county went in the opposite direction, starting at 61 on March 20 and dropping to 31 by April 3.

Statewide case numbers reported by the Minnesota Department of Health show a moderate week to week increase, with the average of 724 new cases per day between April 13 and April 19 about 40 percent higher than the average of 513 cases per day the prior week.

“We have seen an uptick in cases over the last couple of weeks, but I’m happy to say those increases have been fairly moderate,” Health Commissioner Jan Malcolm told Minnesota Public Radio on Monday. “We’re not seeing the kind of rapid, almost vertical increase in cases that we saw in December. We’re watching it very closely, but so far we’re feeling a little more comfortable with what’s going on. As of last week, we had three southern border counties that were in the moderate community spread range, but the rest of the state was in low risk.” As of Thursday, April 14, the COVID data tracker map maintained by the Centers for Disease Control showed all Minnesota counties in green, indicating low community levels. North Dakota, South Dakota, and Iowa had pockets of medium COVID levels, with additional such areas stretching southward through the Midwest into Texas. The highest concentrations of COVID cases were in the New England states, with over half of Maine, Vermont, and New Hampshire showing moderate levels and over half of New York experiencing moderate to high levels of community spread.

But with cases going up again in 34 states, driven largely by the highly contagious BA.2 Omicron subvariant, Minnesota may soon see its case count increase more widely.

The Mayo Clinic’s COVID status and forecasting map doesn’t use the same terminology or data calculations as the CDC’s COVID tracker, but across the next two weeks it predicts case rates per 100,000 people rising in both the Twin Cities and greater Minnesota.

St. Louis County is not one of the counties projected to see an increase by May 1, but the projections show movement in this direction with newly elevated levels in Cass and Kanabec counties. As St. Louis County has been among the last counties in the state to experience prior case surges, cases may well tick upward here within a few weeks. “It’s pretty clear now that COVID, or SARS-CoV-2, is not going to go away, we’re going to be dealing with it as a recurring virus,” Malcolm said. “With so much transmission still happening around the world and over a million cases a day globally, it’s a lot of opportunity for the virus to spin off these variants. The way to keep it manageable, is to keep it from causing such huge disruption and damage to health, is to get vaccinated, staying up to date. And, also, making sure testing is robust so that people know their status and can take appropriate preventive actions.”

EMPLOYMENT

State notches sixth straight month of job growth

by DAVID COLBURN
Cook/Orr Editor

REGIONAL- “Help Wanted” signs are a common sight in storefronts these days as Minnesota and the nation continue to emerge from the COVID pandemic recession, but with record low unemployment and a labor pool still somewhat depressed from pre-pandemic levels, employers in most business and industry sectors are still having tough times filling those new jobs.

The Minnesota Department of Employment and Economic Development (DEED) touted the job growth numbers in a press release, noting that March was the sixth consecutive month that the state has posted job gains.

The COVID recession was dramatically different from the previous two recessions in 2007 and 2001 in both the number of jobs lost and the speed at which they disappeared. During the first two months of the COVID recession, March and April 2020, the state’s economy saw more than 410,000 jobs disappear. In a year and a half, about three-fourths of those jobs, 334,500, were recovered. However, with the pace of job creation slowing, DEED officials estimate job numbers won’t return to pre-pandemic levels until December 2023.

From March 2021 to March 2022, the leisure and hospitality sector, which saw the greatest job losses, had the greatest gains, picking up 36,198 jobs. Mining and logging bucked a national downward trend by adding 261 jobs during the same time period. The only sectors to see declines year-to-year were financial activities, down 1,562 jobs, and education and health services, down 326 jobs.

DEED’s data also showed that the shape of job losses and increases during the pandemic varied among industry sectors. Mining offers a good example. It took the mining industry just 10 months to recover all of the 1,200 jobs it lost, but no job growth followed. Employment contracted again in May 2021 and stayed below pre-pandemic levels for five months. On a percentage basis, however, mining posted the second-highest lost jobs recovery rate about all industries at 94.5 percent.

Minnesota’s unemployment rate of 2.5 percent in March tied for the lowest level ever recorded in February 1999 and was 1.1 percent better than the national rate.

Part of the growth in employment was driven by people returning to the work force. The labor participation rate ticked up from 67.9 to 68.1 percent, again higher than nationally.

“It’s good news for Minnesota that more people are returning to the labor force as job growth continues to surge,” DEED Commissioner Steve Grove said. “However, many Minnesotans who want to work are not connecting with stable employment.”

A recent DEED report shows that potential employees who are black, over the age of 55, or have lower educational attainment levels are having less success in returning to stable employment, the same challenges these groups faced prior to the pandemic.

In the realm of compensation, the news from DEED wasn’t so positive. While low-wage, high-demand jobs have been seeing greater overall wage increases, compensation isn’t keeping up with inflation. Over the past year, the average hourly wage increase for private sector workers was 4.9 percent, well shy of the corresponding inflation rate of 8.5 percent. The results were similar when factoring two years of date, with wages rising 6.3 percent and inflation going up by 11.4 percent. Wage increases in Minnesota lagged behind the national one-year rate of 5.8 percent and two-year rate of 9.6 percent.

warm-up in late March is part of the problem. Several days of spring-like weather thawed road surfaces and prompted the posting of load limits for gravel roads across the county. That’s prevented county road crews from either snowplowing or grading as the combination of freezing and thawing, along with at least half a dozen moderate snowfalls so far this month, have left gravel roads frequently snow-covered, with either frozen ruts or a muddy mess, depending on the day.

“When road restrictions hit, gravel roads are automatically a five-ton posting,” said Boder.

County plow trucks run 45,000-50,000 pounds unloaded and tip the scales at 70,000 pounds with a load of salt and gravel. “For us to go out under the current conditions would do more damage than we could ever justify,” he added.

The county plow trucks don’t have the fine blade control of most smaller plows, designed for pickups, which means they require a hard, frozen surface to prevent road damage. Once the top layer of the gravel roads begins to thaw, plowing becomes difficult, notes Boder. “We’d be plowing a lot of gravel into the ditches,” he said.

While the county does have underbody plows that it can deploy in the event of a major snowfall, he said it hasn’t been worth the mess it would create given that most of recent snows have been in the three-to-five inch range, which is generally passable for most vehicles.

The abundance of potholes right now isn’t unusual in the late winter or early spring, but the frequency of precipitation this month has made it almost impossible for the county to address the issue. “We can’t grade under these conditions,” said Boder. “We’d just make mud.”

Bringing in more material isn’t an option either, notes Boder, because any fresh gravel would only add to the muddy conditions.

For now, said Boder, residents along gravel roads should keep their fingers crossed for a change in the weather pattern, in favor of warmer and drier conditions. “If we were to have a string of five days of dry weather, we might try to get out there and take care of some of the worst of the worst,” he said.

Meanwhile, the weather forecast offers little in the way of relief.

On top of Monday’s and Wednesday’s snowfalls, the forecast is calling for rain on Saturday, with colder weather and on and off chances of rain or snow next week.

Ely school renovation and building project progresses inside

by KEITH VANDERVORT
Ely Editor

ELY – With a September deadline looming and winter weather still swirling outside, the $21.5 million school facility renovation and building project is progressing indoors, according to ISD 696 Interim Superintendent John Klarich.

School board members anticipate receiving a detailed progress report from construction officials on the $21.5 million at their regular meeting on Monday.

A building that will link the Washington and Memorial structures is up and plans call for it to be open when the 2022-23 school year begins in September.

With plans calling for the students and staff to occupy the new building linking the Washington and Memorial buildings on the first day of school on Sept. 6, inflation, supply chain woes and increasing costs are keeping school officials working on several options for additional funding.

“The project is moving along internally,” Klarich told the school board last week. “The new fire hydrant (at the back of the campus), and the water main work in the front will not take place until school is out and the students are gone.”

Despite additional grant funding, the added required infrastructure work will cost the district more than $350,000 extra.

This week, interior work is continuing in the new building that houses an additional gymnasium, commons area, cafeteria and kitchen, media center, industrial and music education class areas, office spaces for the district and both schools, and a new centralized secure entrance

Klarich discussed the growing pile of construction “change orders” for the project.

“I had a long discussion with Todd Erickson (from Kraus-Anderson), the principals, and facilities committee,” he said. “Everything they send us is a change order,” as he held up a stack of documents. “They have ‘change order’ written here, but they are not change orders.”

When school officials approved the boys and girls lockers rooms and the special education area (in Bid Package Four), quotes were required for each portion of work, he said.

“These are not a negative toward the project, but are within the original scope and budget of the project. I told Todd that we should have a different name. These are not change orders. It is fulfilling a bid.”

Klarich reported that he recently approved a $3,190 change order to Red Cedar Steel Erectors to resolve an unforeseen discrepancy in anchoring the new building to the existing structure.

“We put a building in between two other buildings and it has to be anchored and secured. Well, we were seven inches off on one measurement on one of the buildings,” he said. “They had to extend two joists and they cut and welded steel plates to secure it all to keep the integrity of the building. We are trying to connect two 100-year-old buildings. Being a few inches off does happen.”

That expense will come out of the contingency fund, according to Klarich.

“It started out in the $900,000 range and is now down to about $400,000. We will have an update on the contingency fund balance at the end of the month,” he said.

Klarich said the walls in the new building are nearly up.

“The electrical work is getting ready. Things will start moving a little quicker now,” he said.

In terms of the project budget, Klarich added, “We are working diligently on that. Our lobbyists, the Costin Group, Gary Cerkvenik and Jeff Anderson, have two or three bills down in the state legislature. We are not in there by ourselves. We are with a group of schools, including Chisholm, Hibbing and Rock Ridge to get some dollars. We are looking at sales tax help and help from the supply chain increases. We are trying to make up the difference that we lost due to COVID affecting prices in the supply chain, and delivery and everything.”

The state legislature’s regular session will end on May 23.

“We are hoping all parties can get a lock and craft bills that will be acceptable to all, especially in education. In the meantime, it is tough to plan a budget. We are constantly meeting with various groups and looking at funding options and resources for use to complete the project as it was originally intended. That’s my goal,” Klarich said.

EMERGENCY RESPONSE

Homeowner arrested after making incriminating statements in Britt house fire

by DAVID COLBURN
Cook/Orr Editor

BRITT- A 51-year-old Britt homeowner is being held without bail in St. Louis County Jail on suspicion of first-degree arson after a fire on Friday at a residence in Britt.

At approximately 12:14 p.m. on Friday, April 15, St. Louis County Sheriff’s Office deputies were dispatched to a house fire in the 8600 block of Donnywood Circle W. in Britt when a neighbor reported flames coming out of a window of the residence.

While responding to the address, deputies encountered a male walking on a nearby roadway and discovered he was the homeowner of the residence that was on fire. The homeowner, Devin Hadersbeck, made statements to the deputies related to the house fire which lead to his arrest on the arson charge.

Sandy-Pike-Britt, Cook, Embarrass, Mt. Iron and Evergreen fire departments responded and extinguished the fire, preventing it from spreading to a detached garage.

The home, described in county property records as a four-bedroom home co-owned with Kristin L. Weigel with an estimated market value of $140,600, appeared to sustain severe fire, smoke and water damage.

No people were injured during the fire, however three cats inside the residence perished as a result of the fire.

The incident remains under investigation by the St. Louis Co. Sheriff’s Office and MN State Fire Marshalls Office.

If convicted of felony first degree arson, Hadersbeck faces maximum penalties of 20 years in prison and/or a $20,000 fine.

“There are lots of non-profits, but these agencies provide direct services and were directly affected by the pandemic,” he said. “And the four applications we received requested funds equaling about a third of our total funds, with the rest being split between broadband and infrastructure.”

Mayor Roger Skraba added, “We had some robust discussion about how much each group should get and how we should do this. The groups’ contributions to the community helped me make my decision. You got the seniors, the food shelf, daycare, and youth. This is fair. We are helping those groups in the community that need it.”

Budget committee member Al Forsman said the federal government “came out with a lengthy 44-page guide on what is eligible and what is not eligible” for the funds.

“We did have some latitude, but this is what we came up with,” he said.

Langowski added, “The expenses or the request for money was for funds lost during the pandemic. And there was additional pressure put on the Food Shelf and how they are trying to provide additional services to the community. We had a good discussion and the committee came to a consensus that these groups absolutely meet the requirements.”

Other Ely non-profits can still request ARPA funds.

“We did reach out as far as we could. Some groups did not submit anything. Other groups submitted letters supporting other groups requesting funds,” Langowski said. “We still have the ability. The money has to be spent by the end of 2024. We obviously wanted to get that first allocation out there as we received it.”

Emergency Management

Council members approved a recommendation from the Projects Committee to request $2.4 million in federal funding for a new emergency services building. According to Projects Committee minutes from their April 11 meeting, the Ambulance Joint Powers Board continues to look at funding for a new building with a current cost estimate of $3.2 million. The city of Ely needs space to store emergency response equipment, at an estimated cost of $800,000. A new emergency response facility could cost as much as $4 million. State Sen. Tom Bakk is supporting a request for $1.6 million in state funding if the community can fund the remainder.

On a recommendation from the Budget Committee, council members agreed to increase the pay for the Emergency Management Coordinator position from $300 to $500 per quarter. That stipend will be paid to an existing police department member who agrees to take on the added responsibilities.

Council member Forsman reversed his previous concerns with the minor stipend increase. “As you know, I questioned this pay raise, but with the new job description, and the (added) accountability to the council, I feel I can now support this,” he said.

Other business

In other business, the council:

➤ Heard a request from a citizen’s group asking for a letter of support in asking for more Tourism Bureau marketing dollars to be spent on highlighting the “shoulder seasons” between the summer and winter months, especially for more ATV trail use in the area.

➤ Approved a request from the Chamber of Commerce to allow them to use the former Kitchen Building at Semer’s Park for storage.

➤ Approved rental and obstruction permits for the Blueberry Arts Festival and Harvest Moon Festival in 2022.

➤ Approved a new lease agreement for 2022-2024 with the Ely Golf Club Corp.

➤ Approved a temporary liquor license for the Ely-Winton Rod and Gun Club on June 4 and Oct. 15 at the Miner’s Dry House.

➤ Approved a Residential Rehab Loan for Alayna Geisler, 121 E. Boundary St. for $10,000 to replace brick work, chimney flashing and update plumbing.

➤ Reminded residents that city street winter parking restrictions will remain in place until May 31 unless rescinded earlier, which is unlikely this year as the street sweeper has yet to get outside, according to Langowski.

that one of his heroes is Forrest Gump,” Jensen said. “Forrest Gump said, ‘Stupid is as stupid does,’ and President Biden really took that to heart,” Jensen said to giggles and applause from the partisan crowd.

Jensen, from Laketown Township, was born and raised in Sleepy Eye, graduated valedictorian of his 1973 high school class, obtained an undergraduate degree in physiology, magna cum laude, from the University of Minnesota, and then attended Luther Theological Seminary. He received a medical degree from the U of M in 1981.

A former state senator, Jensen dominated a gubernatorial straw poll held at Republican precinct caucuses earlier this year and joins at least eight other GOP candidates to compete in the Aug. 9 primary to win a spot on the November general election ballot.

“I will take my cue when it comes to leadership, whether you like it or not, from a man who did an incredible amount, and his name started with Donald and ended with Trump,” Jensen said. “You know what, the guy was a leader. He may have done a better job with his Twitter account, but when it came to Supreme Court justices he’s got three rock solids. When it came to policy, when it came to reducing regulations, when it came to the economy, when it came to the income tax in 2017, he drove the dial up. He told America that you are going to engage whether you want to or not.”

Jensen went on to praise the twice-impeached chief executive in his handling of NATO and NAFTA.

“We are going to speak truth to power, regardless of how much pain or trouble I get into, and let me tell you, I find ways to get into trouble. Just ask my mother-in-law,” he added.

Jensen spoke to several issues, including racism.

“We are going to rebel against stupidity,” he said. “Stupidity is Critical Race Theory. Stupidity is saying whatever your children do is because of the color of their skin. Whatever you accomplish is because of the color of your skin. There is a far greater demand for racism than there is supply. We are not racist. Certainly, we can be better. Don’t call us a racist country. We are doing everything we can to be a land that provides opportunity but we are not going to provide equal outcome. That’s up to you.”

Jensen said that as governor he will speak for all Minnesotans, including the unborn and those “fragile folks at the end of their lives who were forced to die alone because of bizarre and foolish COVID policies.”

He said that because he refused to indicate death by COVID-19 for his patient who died of stage four colon cancer, he went “from being the most celebrated family doctor in Minnesota in 2016 to being the most investigated physician in the state. That was not an honor I aspired to, but I will wear it as a badge of courage, because I did nothing wrong.”

Public safety is also on the list of Jensen’s priorities.

“Without question, there is a poison of lawlessness that is spreading across the land, and it isn’t just in Minneapolis,” he said. “There is a disrespect for police. Police aren’t the bad guys. We have to put more cops on the street, but we have to do more than that. We have to go after the liberal judges and liberal prosecuting attorneys. We know that catch and release might have some value for walleyes, but it doesn’t do very well for felons.”

In terms of education, Jensen said kids should be funded rather than broken institutions.

“Let’s not make the mistake of bundling teachers with teachers’ unions, because that’s not fair to the teachers. Teachers don’t go into teaching because they want to make a six-figure salary. They go into teaching because they want to touch kids’ lives,” he said.

In his prepared speech, Jensen did not address the sulfide mining issue that continues to divide the Ely community, nor did he reveal what he would do with a nearly $10 billion state surplus. Near the end of his speech, Jensen laid out a plan for what issues he would tackle in the first 100 days in the Governor’s office:

- Rewrite emergency powers legislation;
- Pass three gun laws, including “stand your ground,” “constitutional carry at the age of 18,” and “castle doctrine;”

“When I was asked to come to Ely on a Monday night, I said I would be there,” Jensen said. “We have got to energize one another. We have got to electrify Minnesota. We have mama bears and warrior dads and grandparents and activists across Minnesota who say they have had enough. That’s why I’m here.”

Other candidates stump for votes

Kim Crockett spoke to the Ely crowd about election integrity.

“We can’t achieve change unless we win elections,” she said. “It used to be in America that liberals and conservatives could have a conversation and exchange information and ideas without condemning the other person,” she said.

She is looking to unseat Steve Simon, the current Minnesota Secretary of State.

“We are in our 16th year of a very partisan operation in the office of the Secretary of State,” she said. “This is an office which should be non-partisan in its approach. My goal, should I win, is that Democrats, Independents, Republicans, pot party people, whatever, will say, ‘Crockett runs a clean shop.’”

She is a consultant for a non-profit organization called American Majority, “teaching people about election integrity, here and elsewhere,” and said the last 30 years as a corporate attorney led her to run for the office of Secretary of State.

She asked Ely voters to help her.

“We all want to defeat Walz. We all want to defeat (State Attorney General Keith) Ellison. Everybody knows who they are, but how many of you didn’t know the name of the secretary of state until just recently?” she asked.

“The Democrats are really smart. They focus on elections. We focus on the ‘rah-rah’ of campaigns, and that’s why we’ve been losing over and over again,” she said as she asserted that she “is not a politician but an outsider.”

Crockett implored the audience to sign up to be election judges.

“Vote in person. Let’s starve this chaotic, expensive absentee ballot system,” she said.

Chad Walsh, running to be next sheriff of St. Louis County, was born and raised in Hermantown. He joined the U.S. Army after high school. He served as a law enforcement officer in South Dakota.

He returned to northern Minnesota and started an indoor shooting range business.

“If you want to know where I stand on the Constitution, that’s a clear factor right there,” he said. He also owns a septic company.

Walsh recently served with the Moose Lake Police Department.

“I realized how much I missed (law enforcement),” he said.

“The sheriff is elected by the people and answers directly to the people,” he said. “Therefore, the sheriff doesn’t answer to a mayor. The sheriff doesn’t answer to the governor, or the president, but directly to the citizens. That’s why the sheriff is the most important person in your county. The sheriff has the power to stand up against all those other folks.”

He spoke to the recent mandated COVID-19 public health protocols put in place by the state and the federal government.

“If the government decides tomorrow that you folks can’t go to church, or that you can’t peacefully assemble, is somebody going to stand up for us, the people?” he asked. “Where was our sheriff when the governor said you folks have no right to go to church, and you have no right to peacefully assemble? We the people need to know that whoever is in that position will stand up for us and our Constitutional rights. That is very important.”

Walsh wouldn’t say whether he is Republican or Democrat in his political position.

“I’m an American citizen, my friend. It doesn’t matter what side of the aisle you’re on. We all live in America. We all want to feel safe,” he said.

He said he was asked if he would make a good sheriff.

“Well, I watched all 290 episodes of the Andy Griffith Show, and I can tell you that 90 of them were in color. I can’t make a great sheriff by myself. The people behind you make a great sheriff, and the communities that you protect.”

Easter, which is observed in Ukraine.

The pysanky tradition dates back to the times before Christ. The brightly colored eggs helped herald in the beginning of spring, and then became associated with the Easter holiday. Traditional patterns and designs were passed down through generations in each family, along with the recipes for the natural dyes that were used.

There are many other stories related to the eggs and the power and good luck they conferred.

The eggs, like the country they represent, are both fragile and strong. If stored out of the sun, the colorful dyes last for generations.

John and Denise first learned the art of Ukrainian egg decorating when they took a class in 1985 from a renowned pysanky artist named Lucy Karcok, whose eggs are displayed at the Smithsonian. They continued creating eggs, learning as they went. They taught their four children the craft, and it is something the family likes to do in late winter each year.

“The peasants believed there was great power embodied in the egg, so they decorated them in the spring to celebrate the renewal of nature and life,” Denise said. “Geometrically decorated eggs with stylized animals were given to symbolize protection, health, fertility, love, bountiful harvest, prosperity, etc. Once Christianity arrived, symbols of the church and love of God were incorporated.”

The Lindquists have taken the tradition and made it their own. Some of Denise’s favorite creations are a series of eggs decorated with turtles, which were their children’s favorite animal.

“I like that it is good prayers and wishes if you gift one of these eggs to someone you care about,” she said. “It is also fun to share how to create them with others.”

The skill is an ancient one, she said. “And it is good to keep this type of thing going.”

Traditionally, the dyes used were derived from nature, she said, and a wax resist process was used. Melted beeswax was applied to the egg between dipping in different colored dyes, starting with lighter colors and then adding a new color in each step. Nowadays, commercially purchased dyes are used, though Denise said learning to make natural dyes was on her “bucket list.”

A candle was, and still is, used to melt the wax off the eggs between each trip into the dye bath. The kistka, a copper cone for scooping beeswax which is attached to a dowel and heated by a candle flame, is still traditionally used, but Denise mostly uses an electric version, which allows more detailed placement of the wax on the egg. She still practices with the old-style kistka, and that was the task given to the participants in the class.

“Everyone enjoyed themselves,” she said, “but some had trouble with the kistka. It does take some practice.”

Getting the precise geometric and floral patterns placed on a real egg also takes patience and practice.

“This is very challenging,” said participant Teresa McCue Thompson, who herself is an expert and teacher of rosemaling, a style of Norwegian folk art painting.

Students rose to the challenge and produced a nice selection of very colorful eggs. The decorating is done on raw eggs, so stable hands are required as the eggs are painted with wax, dyed, cleaned of wax, and painted again and again. Once completed, the eggs are sprayed with varnish, and once dry, will have two small holes poked in them so the egg white and yolk can be carefully blown out.

Creating a symmetrical design on the egg is a challenge for some, but Denise said it came easily to her.

“It just seems obvious to me,” she said. She started out studying art in college but graduated with a dual major in music and biology. She still teaches piano, but lately those lessons have been over Facetime. Artistic talent runs in her family, she said, noting she has some very talented sisters.

John, a retired St. Louis County health inspector, is a long-time volunteer with the Boy Scouts, leading a troop for 16 years when their children were younger. Denise said they have done the class with kids this age, but often will pencil in the patterns on the eggs to get them started.

The couple retired to a rural area outside of Soudan and live off-the-grid. They garden, harvest and forage for wild foods, make wine and beer, and put up a lot of their own foods. Denise sells their jams and jellies, maple syrup, breads, and treats at the Tower Farmers Market. Right now, they are busy harvesting maple sap from a large grove of trees out on Birch Point that will be sold at the farmers market this summer.

“Our cabin is a work in process,” she said. “But it was always a dream to live out here in the woods.”

The couple has many other hobbies.

“We like to dabble in interesting things,” she said.

The couple was also happy to be able to help out the Lake Vermilion Cultural Center. Once the interior of the building is completed, it will become a home for many types of artistic classes, educational talks, and concerts.

Prom Pop-Up a hit

Idea offers a solution for those with nothing to wear to their high school’s top gala

by KEITH VANDERVORT
Ely Editor

ELY – Memorial High School students here planning to go to Prom this year, but have nothing to wear, can take advantage of a free Promwear Popup event at school next week. Hurry, as Prom 2022 is scheduled for Saturday, April 30.

English teacher Amy Kingsley said the idea of having a pop-up clothing boutique for prom literally “popped into my head,” earlier this month and she floated the idea to a couple of teachers and school administrators.

“We have dozens and dozens of great dresses. And we have many men’s suits, too.

Tracy Anderson
Ely teacher

“There is really a need and a desire, so here we are,” she said.

ISD 696 Indian Education Liaison Tracy Anderson is helping Kingsley with the fundraising event.

First, they needed prom wear donations, so they put a bulletin in the school, went to social media, and spread the word as best they could in the short amount of time they had.

“So many dresses and suits came in quickly, it was amazing,” Kingsley said. “Some of the donated formal wear still have the tags on them. I heard from many kids who bought outfits but didn’t get to wear them when COVID shut everything down.”

Ely Memorial’s prom was canceled in 2020, and an outdoor event was held last year at the Longbranch. This year, a more traditional celebration is being planned at Ely’s Historic State Theater and Insula Restaurant.

Part of a high school classroom has racks full of clothing.

“We have dozens and dozens of great dresses,” Anderson said, as she organized the clothing by size. “We even have three identical dresses. We have many men’s suits. This is all great stuff. And we have received lots of pairs of shoes, beaded purses, other accessories, and even make-up.”

“An online survey for students revealed a surprising need and lots of support for this effort,” Kingsley said. “One guy was looking for a powder blue suit.”

Minor sewing repairs and cleaning of outfits is also done if needed.

“We have a sewing machine here to do easy fixes or an alteration or two,” Anderson said.

Anderson and Kingsley talked about some of the unique prom outfits seen in recent years.

“These days, prom-goers can get away with just about anything. And it’s fun to dress up and make a statement.”

And don’t forget that the Middle School Spring Fling is scheduled for Saturday, May 7.

Kingsley said she is focused on giving everyone a chance to participate in prom if they want to.

“Everyone deserves to feel special. These days everyone looks to recycle and reuse everything. We want to get away from that second-hand stigma,” she said. “Let’s keep the cycle going. Everybody wins.”

Students can shop for prom wear in the mornings from 8:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m., after school, and “by appointment” in Room 13 near the girls’ locker room.

“We are trying this as free this year,” Kingsley said. “We ask for a suggested donation of $5, but everything is free. We hope to grow this into a nice fundraising event in the future.”

HEALTH CARE CHALLENGES

Pandemic worsens rural health care staffing woes

by DAVID COLBURN
Cook-Orr Editor

REGIONAL- Rural hospitals and health systems have long faced challenges in recruiting qualified staff relative to their urban counterparts, and the stress and burnout from the COVID-19 pandemic could end up making that task even more difficult in the years to come.

That’s one of the takeaways from “Minnesota’s Health Care Workforce: Pandemic-provoked Workforce Exits, Burnout, and Shortages,” a survey-based report released last week by the Office of Rural Health and Primary Care at the Minnesota Department of Health.

The report focuses on the responses of licensed healthcare professionals such as physicians, registered nurses, physical therapists, alcohol and drug counselors, and others, to surveys they are required to complete when they renew their licenses.

The U.S. Health Resources and Services Administration currently classifies the Cook/Orr area as a medically underserved area and Ely as medically underserved for low-income populations, and the MDH report clearly illustrates the current disparity of providers between urban and rural areas of the state.

For all but licensed practical nurses, rural area healthcare professionals have far more potential patients than their urban counterparts. The least discrepancy is found among registered nurses, where there is one RN for every 52 people in urban areas and one for every 90 people in rural areas. For physicians, there is one doctor per 894 rural residents, more than three times the 245 per urban practitioner. Of particular relevance to the COVID pandemic is a shortage of respiratory therapists, or RTs. Urban areas have 2,700 people per RT, but that number more than doubles to 5,710 people per RT in rural areas.

Prior to the pandemic, these disparities in rural areas resulted in longer wait times to see providers, longer travel distances to access care, greater potential for hospital bed shortages, and hospitals and clinics shutting down some type of care altogether, the report noted.

Particularly disturbing for the future of rural healthcare is the reported increase of all licensed health professionals reporting their intentions to leave their respective fields within the next five years compared to pre-pandemic levels— as well as the reason why.

In past surveys, retirement was the most common reason cited for leaving, and with the average age of rural physicians being 58, as opposed to 48 in urban areas, it’s still a significant factor. But after two years of the COVID pandemic, burnout and job dissatisfaction garnered a larger piece of the pie across all disciplines. In particular, physician assistants and respiratory therapists are the two occupations most likely to cite those reasons for leaving their professions. Among nurses leaving the profession during the pandemic, the number of nurses under age 35 was greater than that of older nurses.

So, an already challenging situation has been made worse in both the short and long terms by the COVID pandemic. How will rural health care providers respond?

Recruit and retain

Cook Hospital Human Resources Director Stephanie Maki is well versed in the ins and outs of finding new staff and readily admits that recruitment is a difficult puzzle to solve.

As most rural health care providers have learned, some sort of local connection for prospective employees is an extra incentive to take a rural-based position, so Maki initiates searches with a couple of time-tested techniques, word-of-mouth and advertising openings in area newspapers, and also posts them to social media.

“We use Facebook here, and LinkedIn, those seem to be the go-to ones at this point,” Maki said. “And then it really depends on the position.”

Those techniques can work well for lower-level positions such as certified nurse aides, but Maki typically casts a wider net when looking for licensed professionals.

College health care degree programs are often good resources to tap for recruitment, and Maki uses an online career portal geared toward college graduates, known as Handshake, to zero in on possibilities.

“They have all the universities and colleges listed on their website, so I can go through and look to see which colleges graduate, for example, radiology staff. I’ll pick those colleges and send them flyers,” Maki said.

There are numerous profession-specific sites where Maki can go to place ads, although those typically come at a higher cost than ads on generic job posting sites, she said. Some have additional options, for additional cost, such as sending a broadcast email of a position announcement.

A newer wrinkle for tapping into potential employees is to make direct contact with people who are already certified or licensed. The pandemic led to a shortage in long-term care facilities of certified nurse assistants, a result in part from many CNAs leaving their jobs to care for children or other family members and those who needed a break from the added stress. Needing to find CNAs herself, Maki purchased a mailing list with the names and addresses of all of the CNAs living within a 50-mile radius of Cook and sent postcards to 775 current CNAs listed within that area.

For higher-level positions, Maki has sometimes needed to get help from a professional search firm, a more expensive option but one that can produce results.

“Some of them aren’t costly upfront, but once you hire somebody they will require payments on a percentage of that individual’s salary. We have done it in the past for the director of nursing position, and for dietary manager, because that was a really tough one.”

Many health care employers have resorted to offering signing bonuses for new employees, ranging for a few hundred to several thousand dollars depending on the position and urgency of need. Maki said Cook Hospital has used such bonuses sparingly, as they only work for a limited range of positions unless the hospital’s labor union approves them for others.

Of course, the best way to avoid the maze of the hiring process is to keep the staff you already have. Cook Hospital has as one of its benefits an employee assistance program that provides free counseling for personal and financial issues, things that have been sources of increased stress during the pandemic. Maki said the hospital has also offered in-house support by providing information to employees about different stress reduction techniques.

But for the foreseeable future, finding employees to bolster the rural health care workforce will remain a big challenge.

“I wish I knew a solution,” Maki said. “Our senior leadership is really focusing on recruiting and retaining staff. It’s very important to us to make this a facility that people love to work for.”

Obituaries and Death Notices

Syvilla M. Shermer

Syvilla Margueritte Shermer, loving mother, grandmother and friend, went to be with our Lord and Savior on Monday, April 11, 2022. A celebration of life will be held at 3 p.m. on Friday, May 6 at the First Baptist Church in Cook. Visitation will be one hour prior to the start of the service. Immediately following the service, a time for sharing, music and dinner will be held at the Cook Community Center located at Doug Johnson Rec Park. In lieu of flowers and monetary gifts, please donate to the North Woods School Library or the First Baptist Church Benevolent Fund. Arrangements are with Mlaker Funeral Home of Cook.

Syvilla was born to Hilda and Ralph Hall on Feb. 12, 1924, in Bloomfield, Neb. After graduating high school, Syvilla went on to be a nanny and a school teacher. She married Clinton “Nick” Shermer on May 25, 1946. Early in their marriage they left the Sand Hills of Nebraska for a better life. For a short period of time they lived in Santa Rosa, Calif., and Haines, Ore. In 1959, they moved to Greaney and in the early 1960s moved to the farm in Gheen where together they operated the family farm and raised nine children.

Syvilla loved education and was instrumental in creating the St. Louis County Schools. She spent many years serving on the board. She would often tell her family, “Learn all that you can because they cannot take knowledge away from you.” She was small in stature but mighty in her tenacious personality and wasn’t afraid of life’s challenges.

She walked by faith and was a strong believer in Jesus Christ. As in all aspects of her life, she would study the Bible and was ready to share her knowledge. She most loved her children, grandchildren and family. She celebrated all of their accomplishments and was there for any unexpected life events.

Syvilla is survived by her nine children, Dennis (Sharen) Shermer, Irene Semon, Clifford (Mary) Shermer, Mark (Karen) Shermer, Martha Nosie, Ruth (John) Huismann, James (Rebecca) Shermer, Joe (Amy Nelson) Shermer and Kay (Timothy) Cornelius; 26 grandchildren; 45 great-grands; five great-great-grands; and three siblings, John (Mary Ann) Hall, Mavis Hubble and Elaine Forbes.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Clinton “Nick”; grandson, Anthony “Tony” Cornelius; son-in-law, William “Bill” Nosie; sisters, Roberta, Mary Ann and Arlene; and brother, Harlan.

Douglas P. Flack

Douglas “Doug” Paul Flack, 70, of Cook, passed away on Wednesday, March 16, 2022. A celebration of life will be held at 11 a.m. on Saturday, May 7 at Mlaker Funeral Home in Cook. Visitation will be held one hour prior to the service. A luncheon will be held immediately following the service at the Cook VFW. Arrangements are with Mlaker Funeral Home of Cook.

Doug was born on March 4, 1952, in Cook, to Warren “Pat” and Dolores “Dottie” (Helstrom) Flack. He attended school in Cook, graduating from Cook High School in 1970. He was united in marriage to Linda Joyce Egger on Jan. 20, 1973, in Virginia. Doug was employed as a heavy equipment operator for St. Louis County for 21 years before his retirement.

Doug was a happy-go-lucky guy; he was always friendly to everyone. He loved to watch old movies and play a good card game. Above everything else, Doug cherished and loved his grandchildren.

Doug is survived by his wife, Linda of Cook; children, daughter Nikole Peterson of Eveleth and son Travis Flack (Teresa)

Home in Cook. Visitation will be held one hour prior to the service.

She is survived by her loving husband, Dana Frame; sister, Irene (Rich) Auel; sisters-in-law, Ingrid (John) Snell, Leslie Lynch (Allen Schug) and Natalie Frame; and many nieces, nephews and cousins.

Barbara J. Conder

Barbara Jean Bergan Conder, 69, longtime Ely resident, died on Sunday, April 10, 2022, at Edgewood Senior Living in Virginia. A Mass of Christian Burial was held on Wednesday, April 20 at St. Anthony’s Catholic Church in Ely. Father Brandon Moravitz was the celebrant. Interment followed in the Ely Cemetery. Memorials are preferred and because of Barbara’s great love for the missions, may be directed to Kree and Emmanuel Peña at Family Missions Company, <https://www.familymissionscompany.com/project/ekpena>. Family services were provided by Bauman-Cron, a Bauman Family Funeral Home in Virginia.

She is survived by her husband, Dan Conder; son, Jared Conder of Las Vegas; siblings, Michael (Nancy) Bergan of Torrance, Calif., Mary (Mike) Blaney of Green Bay, Wis., and Patti (Steve) Schuchart of Oconto, Wis.; numerous nieces, nephews, extended family and a host of friends.

PUBLIC NOTICE

GENERAL NOTICE TO CONTROL OR ERADICATE NOXIOUS WEEDS

Notice is hereby given this day of April 22, 2022 pursuant to Minnesota Statutes, Section 18.83, Subdivision 1 (2015), that all persons in St. Louis County, Minnesota, shall control or eradicate all noxious weeds on land they occupy or are required to maintain. Control or eradication may be accomplished by any lawful method, but the method(s) applied may need to be repeated in order to prevent the spread of viable noxious weed seeds and other propagating parts to other lands. Failure to comply with the general notice may mean that an individual notice, Minnesota Statutes, Section 18.83, Subdivision 2 (2015), will be issued. An individual notice may be appealed within two working days of receipt to the appeal committee in the county where the land is located. Failure to comply with an individual notice will mean that the inspector having jurisdiction may either hire the work done or seek a misdemeanor charge against the person(s) who failed to comply. If the work hired is done by the inspector, the cost can be placed as a tax upon the land and collected as other real estate taxes are collected. You may obtain a list of the plants that are designated as noxious weeds and the members of the appeal committee from your County Agricultural Inspector or County-Designated Employee. You can also obtain this information from your Local Weed Inspectors. Local Weed Inspectors include the township supervisors, city mayors or their appointed assistants. More information regarding the statewide listed noxious weeds, the MN Noxious Weed law and a list of County Agricultural Inspectors and County Designated Employees can be obtained from the Minnesota Department of Agriculture's Website by visiting: <https://www.mda.state.mn.us/plants-insects/noxious-and-invasive-weed-program>

TO FEED OR NOT TO FEED?

New strain of bird flu raises feeder concerns

Some biologists urge cessation of wild bird feeding, but others say that’s unwarranted

by MARSHALL HELMBERGER
Managing Editor

REGIONAL— Should residents of the North Country quit feeding wild birds temporarily? That’s the hot debate on the Ely Field Naturalists email listserv and elsewhere among bird watching enthusiasts.

The source of the debate is the sudden appearance of a Eurasian strain of the avian flu that is apparently spreading throughout North America. The spread of the strain is prompting major concerns among poultry producers, who have already suffered losses (either through death or culling to prevent spread) of over 20 million birds.

The avian flu has also spread to wild birds, although the extent of that infection remains unknown. Deaths have been reported among waterfowl and some raptors and the situation recently prompted the Minnesota Raptor Center to issue a statement urging the public to refrain from feeding wild birds, since feeders could be a means of spreading the disease.

While officials with the Raptor Center aren’t the only wildlife professionals who’ve made that plea, there is no unanimity on the question. In response to the public debate,

LAKE VERMILION

Walleye numbers remain strong

Latest DNR test-netting points to another strong season, with an abundance of “eaters”

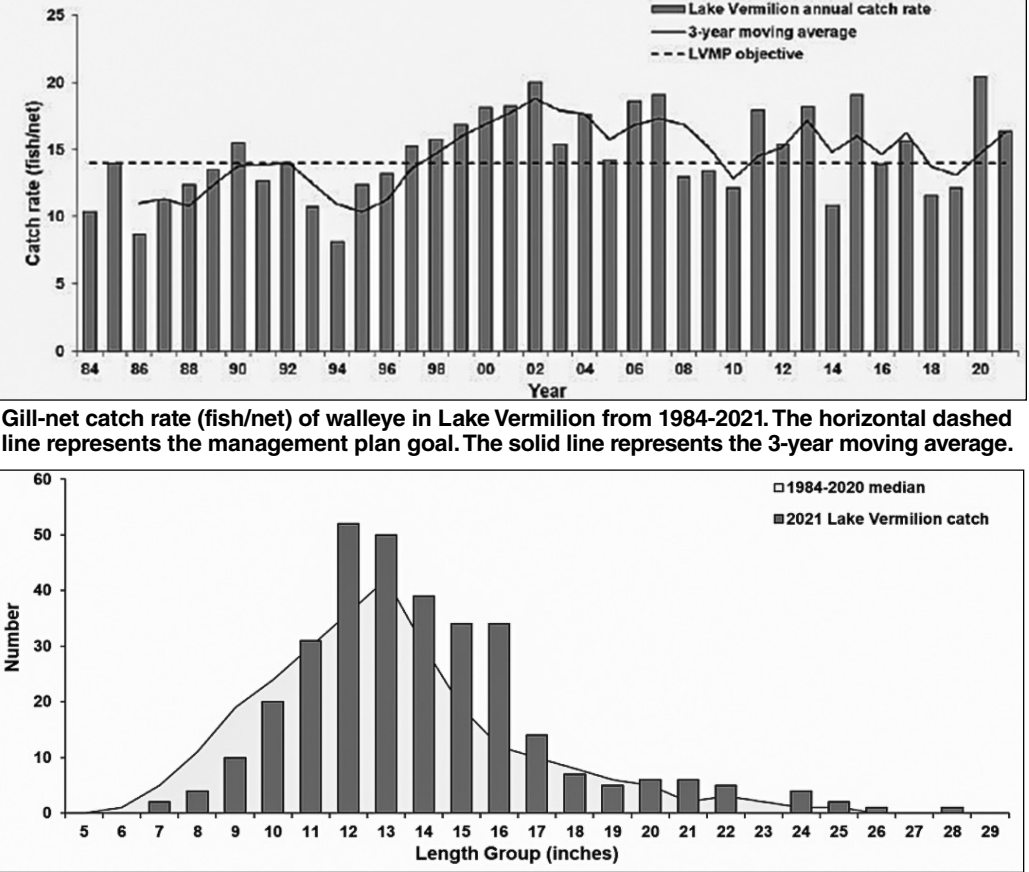

by MARSHALL HELMBERGER
Managing Editor

LAKE VERMILION— The 2022 fishing opener is right around the corner, and on Lake Vermilion, the walleyes are waiting. Lots of them.

That’s the upshot of the latest assessment of the Vermilion fishery, just released by the Department of Natural Resources. Test netting conducted on walleye, perch, and northern last fall by DNR fisheries staff found that walleye numbers on the sprawling lake remain well above the long-term average due to strong recruitment from several recent year-classes.

The top-line average number, of 16.4 walleye per net, is significantly above the lake’s long-term management objective of 14 walleye per net. Yet the size distribution of all those walleyes is perhaps the best news of all for anglers this summer, according to DNR large lake specialist Matt Hennen, who produces the report. He notes that fish between 11-17 inches predominated in the walleye catch. “Also, the catch rate of fish from the range anglers prefer to keep, from 13 to 20 inches, was notably high,” Hennen said. Those fish are all below the current protected slot of 20-26 inches and are within the range most preferred by anglers for the frying pan.

“These fish should provide ample catch and harvest opportunities in 2022,” wrote Hennen in his report. “Also, an abundance of walleyes over 20 inches will continue to provide memorable catch opportunities throughout the lake while also ensuring plenty of spawners for future generations.”

The good news for walleye anglers extends across the lake, as the latest results reflect strong improvement in walleye numbers on the lake’s western basin, where a limited number of eating-sized walleye in some recent years had frustrated fishing guides, resort owners, and anglers.

The walleye numbers were slightly higher in the eastern basin, with an average of 16.8 walleye per net. Yet the catch rate on the western basin wasn’t far behind, at an average of 15.8 walleye per net. That was the third highest catch rate on record on the western basin and it comes on the heels of last year’s catch rate of 16.0 walleye per net, which further confirms the strong walleye numbers on the lake’s west end. “The consecutive years of high catches in West Vermilion is the result of an exceptionally strong 2018 year-class driving recruitment especially in that basin,” wrote Hennen in his

Four walleye limit appears dead for another year

by MARSHALL HELMBERGER
Managing Editor

REGIONAL— It appears anglers will be able to continue to keep up to six walleyes on most Minnesota lakes, at least for another year. A bill that would have reduced the statewide limit to four walleye appears to have hit a roadblock in the Minnesota Senate, which had been advancing a provision authored by Rep. Carrie Ruud, R-Breezy Point.

The effort to reduce the walleye limit has been in play at the Capitol for the past few years, without ever reaching the goal line. This time around, it appears that intra-party politics may have played a role in its defeat. Rep. Rob Ecklund, DFL-International Falls, said the measure appears to have been a factor in the recent decision by Seventh District Republicans to endorse Sen. Justin Eichorn, of Grand Rapids, over Ruud. Both senators ended up in the same district in the wake of redistricting. Eichorn, who had been an early co-author of Ruud’s walleye limit revision, abruptly withdrew his support shortly after the new district maps were released, an apparent play for support from those who opposed the change.

The proposed change, which has the quiet backing of the Department of Natural Resources, has faced some opposition from both anglers and resort owners on lakes where the six-walleye limit is still in effect. Virtually all of the state’s ten most popular walleye lakes, including Lake Vermilion, have a four-walleye special regulation already in effect.

The proposed reduction to a limit of four statewide may be dead for this year, but Ecklund said he expects it will reintroduced next year. “I think the time has come,” he said. Ecklund has introduced the measure in the House in previous years and said he plans to do so again if he’s re-elected in November. “We’ll have to develop a strategy to get it done,” he said.

The House never took up the measure this year, said Ecklund, because he and other supporters had assumed that the Senate would approve the change, which could have then been rolled into the joint natural resources omnibus bill at the end of session.

While Ecklund said he’s heard

report. That year class should continue to yield big returns for Vermilion anglers and preliminary estimates suggest the 2019-year class is above average as well, so the good fishing is likely to continue.

What’s more, last fall’s electrofishing assessment, which looks at young-of-the-year success, found that numbers are above average and that the young walleyes were considerably larger than average, which typically improves their winter survival.

“Based on the catch rates and size of fish captured, the 2021 year-class is likely to be moderate to strong,” concludes Hennen.

Yellow perch

Last fall’s test netting averaged 31.5 perch per net, or somewhat above the long-term average. At the same time, fisheries staff continued to find significant differences between the eastern and western basin.

“The 2021 East Vermilion catch rate of 15.3 fish/net was nearly identical to 2020 (15.6 fish/net) and fell well below average for that basin,” wrote Hennen in his report. “This marks the sixth time in the last seven years and the 12th time in the last 15 years that the catch rate has been below historical averages. Overall, East Vermilion yellow perch gill net catch rates have displayed a decreasing trend since the early 1990s which is likely due to a combination of several factors.”

By contrast, the perch count on the lake’s west end was a phenomenal 55.8 fish per net, the highest ever observed there, a continuance of a trend of very high perch numbers on the west end in recent years. While perch are primarily a forage species for larger game fish, anglers regularly harvest larger perch, which are excellent eating, similar to walleye.

At the same time, the number of perch nine inches or larger, which is the size most anglers prefer, has been trending downward in recent years and was below the historical average on the lake during last fall’s assessment. Hennen reported that the data suggest a shift in the size structure of perch on the lake.

Northern pike

The DNR reported a total of ten northern pike caught in gill nets during the fall assessment, a low number that continues a declining lakewide trend over the past three decades. The size structure, however, has shifted toward larger fish, which may be partially attributable to the protected slot limit that’s been in place on Vermilion since 2003.

The 2022 fishing opener is set for Saturday, May 14.

the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources recently issued a statement clarifying that the DNR is not urging the public to discontinue bird feeding. “We have not received any confirmed reports of songbirds affected by this strain of avian influenza,” reads the DNR statement. At the same time, the DNR reminds members of the public who do feed birds to take regular steps to clean their feeders to protect birds against other infections, like salmonella.

To date, the new avian flu strain is not known to have infected any significant number of the species of birds that frequent feeders, but is primarily limited to migratory waterfowl, shorebirds, and birds of prey that consume infected birds. That’s according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The conservation group Birds Canada recently advised its members that “the use of backyard feeders is still safe.” The main exception would be for people who also care for poultry, in which case the group recommends that growers bring their domestic fowl inside to protect them from interaction with wild birds, which could be carrying the virus that causes the illness.

The discussion of the issue among members of the Ely Field Naturalists has been spirited, with arguments on both sides. Advocates of discontinuing feeding argue that it’s a purely recreational activity and there’s no need to put wild birds at risk unnecessarily.

But others point out that birds, particularly migrants, often rely on feeders for at least a portion of their diet, especially in years like this one, when winter lingers well into April, keeping many of their food sources under deep snow.

Once spring-like conditions arrive in the North Country, birds should find more ready access to food sources, at which time many area residents discontinue bird feeding for the summer. As with human flu viruses, the onset of warmer weather also tends to reduce the incidence of the disease, which should lower the risk for wild birds.

There is little sign that the flu virus will be able to spread from birds to people, but officials note that people should wear proper protection if handling birds that may be affected.

from some constituents opposed to the change, he said he heard the same fears expressed by Rainy Lake resort owners when the limit was trimmed to four there several years ago. “We were told the world was going to end, but it didn’t happen,” said Ecklund.

With modern electronics, Ecklund said anglers have too big of an advantage and that limiting the harvest is the only way to maintain healthy fisheries.

Work at the TIMBERJAY!

The Timberjay has an opening for a part-time staffer to work in our Tower office. Duties include local reporting, editing of community notices, page layout, photography, and more. Lots of variety, flexible hours as long as work gets done by our deadline. Job would be about 12 hours a week (Tuesday through Thursday), with more hours available if desired. Looking for someone who enjoys working in a fast-paced environment, has good attention to detail, and enjoys dealing with the public. Job requires office computer skills (typing, email, familiarity with basic software programs). We will train the right candidate on graphics/page layout software.

For more information, call Jodi at 218-753-2950 (office), 218-750-3513 (cell), or email editor@timberjay.com.
